Minister tells JS Regulator at Boaljuri canal under review

Irrigation, Water Development and Flood Control Minister M Majid-ul-Huq yesterday informed the Jatiya Sangsad that the feasibility for construction of a regulator-cum-navigation lock at the mouth of the Boaljuri canal in Hajiganj under Chandpur district was under review of the Water Development Board (WDB) in the light of FAP-5 study, reports BSS.

MA Mattin (BNP-Chandpur) regarding construction of the regulator, the minister said that in the south-east regional study report under FAP-5, the construction of a regulator on the Boaljuri canal at Matlab-Gauripur road crossing had undergone a preliminary study. He said the report prepared by the consultants was approved by the FAP technical committee on June 18, 1994.

He said, since the regulator included in the report is linked with the Sonaichari-Dakatia-Little Feni drainage, flood control and irrigation project, a draft has been prepared for a detailed study which was awaiting approval of the Water Development Board.

Matin in his notice said that the 11-mile long Boaljuri canal, which passes through Hajiganj, Kachua and Matlab thana and the River Dakatia, was the main source of water. He said construction of the proposed regulator-cum-navigation lock would facilitate irrigation of 15,000 acres of land and contribute towards increased production of food.

He said, local people have been constructing temporary embankments across the canal for the last three years and irrigating five thousand acres of land with the help of floating pumps and electric motors for cultivation of the IRRI crop. He said it was not possible for the poor farmers to continue this effort every year and demanded necessary steps in constructing the proposed regulator-cum-navigation lock.
