China predicts retail price index to rise by 8 pc in '94

BEIJING, Oct 14: China's State Information Center expects China's overall prices to fall during the next few months, while the retail price index is expected to rise by 8 per cent in 1994 from last vear, an official report said Friday, reports AP.

The center said the rise in the retail index price will be 14 per cent to 15 per cent in the fourth quarter of this year following a 19 per cent rise during the third quarter, the China Securities Daily reported Friday

China's nationwide consumer price index rose 22.8 per cent between January and August.

Xu Hongyuan, an information center official in charge of such forecasts, said improved distribution, measures to enforce price controls and increased supply of scarce prod ucts would help lead to a fall in the retail price index during the next few months.

The report did not provide the formula used to calculate the retail sales index.

China is expected to announce the total value of retail sales for September soon. China's retail sales volume rose 34 per cent to 128.6 billion vuan (15.06 billion dollars) in August from the same period a vear earlier.

Iran, Indonesia agree to boost economic cooperation

JAKARTA, Indonesia, Oct 14: Indonesia and Iran on Friday agreed to increase air and sea links between the two countries and to strengthen economic and technical cooperation, reports AP.

The informal agreements were reached during talks between President Suharto and Iran's President Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, who arrived Thursday for a three-day

Indonesia plans to build textile, mineral water and palm oil factories in fran, Murdiono, minister at the state secretariat, told reporters.

He said Iran agreed to serve as the entry point for Indonesia's exports of non-oil commodities to the central Asian market.

At a banquet speech Thursday night, Rafsanjani in an apparent reference to the United States said Iran will not accept world leadership claims by any country.

He said the only legitimate world order is one not influenced by "arrogant powers' interference," he said. He said issues such as human rights have been used by certain countries to strengthen their hegemony and to justify interference in the internal affairs of other countries.

Rafsanjani, accompanied by his wife and Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati, plan to visit a state-owned aircraft factory, IPTN, in the nearby city of Bandung. Last year, Iran bought four Super Puma helicopters built by IPTN and Indonesia hopes to sell more aircraft to Tehran.

Asia-Pacific economic integration on the rise

SINGAPORE, Oct 14: The economic integration of Asian-Pacific nations is increasing. but European firms remain under-represented in the region and risk being left behind, according to Asian leaders participating in an economic conference here, reports AFP.

"Growth poles....are teaching our local peoples the virtues of working together and trading directly as in ancient times," said Philippine President Fidel Ramos.

He identified the areas as Hong Kong, Taiwan and South China, as well as Singapore, Malaysia and Brunei.

Speaking at the three-day Europe-East Asia summit or-ganized by the Switzerlandbased world economic forum. Ramos said " inter-regional trade now binds our countries all the way from Japan to Australia." Long dependent on their exports to the United States. Asian countries still only realize 43 per cent of their international commerce from their near neighbours.

In contrast, the European Union increased its trading among members from 54 per cent in 1985 to 60 per cent today, said Singapore Prime Minister Goh Chok Tong in his inaugural address.

But things are changing quickly.

The Malaysian Minister of International Trade and Industry, Rafidah Aziz, said Asian enterprises are creating a network of commercial relations with companies in other countries of the region." The buzz world for the decade to come will be Asian networking," she said.

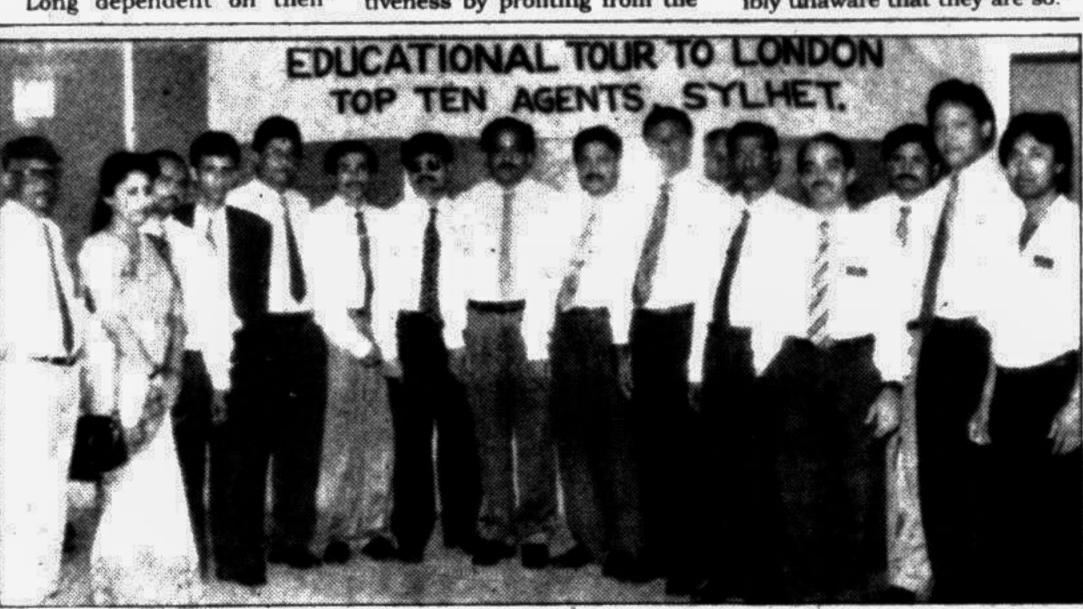

Asian enterprises are interested in investing in Asia not only to open new markets, but also to increase their competitiveness by profiting from the strengths of each country, she

An impetus to economic integration in Asia may be given next month in Indonesia during the meeting of the 17 countries of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum, which Ramos expects will decide to liberalise regional commerce.

Rámos also said the creation of a free trade zone including the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (AS-EAN) must be speeded up. A free exchange zone must be in place by 2003, five years ahead of schedule, he said.

Asian officials say European countries do not yet realize the importance of Asian development." Europe still has to truly discover Asia." said Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad. Too many European industries are "incredibly Eurocentric and often incredibly unaware that they are so."

Moro rebels occupy irrigation project in Philippines

COTABATO, Chilippines, Oct 14: Muslin. guerillas occupied an irrigition project being built by a South Korean firm, less than two months after a similar takeover, the local military chief said here today, reports AFP.

Brigadier General Renato Garcia said 150 guerillas of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) seized the 10-hectare (24.7 acre) Shinsung Corporation site in Carmen town on Thursday, scaring away 21 policemen who were guarding the area.

Korean workers were on vacation and were not at the site when it was seized. MILF guerillas occupied the same site in August, trapping seven South Korean workers in the compound for a week. They later agreed to withdraw peacefully. The MILF, a splinter group of the main Muslim insurgent organisation, the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), had demanded in August that the military move away from the site and that some of their members be employed as workers in the project. Garcia said MILF members

IMF chief's Manila visit to be protested

MANILA Oct 14 Groups opposed to the economic policies of the International Mone tary Fund said Friday they will hound the head of the Fund with protests during his visit here next week, reports AP.

Michel Camdessus mana ging director of the IMF, is scheduled to arrive in Manila Saturday for a four-day visit that will include talks with President Fidel Ramos and the government's economic offi-

Camdessus, who has twice postponed a visit to the Philippines, will also meet manila Archbishop Cardinal Jaime Sin and representatives of non-governmental organizations, including militant antiforeign-debt groups like the Freedom from Debt Coalition.

Coalition President Leonor Briones, said the protests include pickets at venues of all of Camdessus meetings.

"It is only right that the top executive of the IMF should come here and we can tell him exactly what we fell about what the IMF is doing in the Philippines," Briones said.

"Instead of uplifting the plight of the Filipino. IMF policies in fact worsened the state of the Philippine economy," Briones said.

Briones also challenged the IMF chief to a public debate on its economic policies.

Former army Maj Abraham Purugganan, an official of the military rebel group. Young Officers Union, said his organization will support the protest but declined to specify what action it will take.

The officers union took part in the 1989 coup attempt against former President Corazon Aquino. The group is now holding peace talks with the Ramos government.
