Continuing Traffic Medley in City

By AS M Nurunnabi

Current life in Dhaka city is plagued with many ills, some of which are so serious and persistent that they seem to raise doubts whether we have a civilised existence. The two outstanding aspects of the malaise in the city-life seem to be among other things, the mounting problems of traffic jams and road accidents.

Dhaka's traffic problems have always been a subject of exasperation. A lot of studies have already been made about their genesis, pattern and possible solutions. But proper remedial steps in the light of such studies do not seem to be much in evidence. There are more than five lakh vehicles both motorised and non-motorised - that ply on the:2.231 km of city roads, at an average rate of 246 automobiles per minute at city centres. A survey shows that a typical jam in old Dhaka involving 100 vehicles for one and a half hours cost the road users about Tk 1.5 lakh.

The present state of traffic situation in the city leads to the inevitable conclusion that one of the main causative factors for the traffic clog is the unbridled proliferation of rickshaws. Since the rickshaws constitute the pillar of transport system for the common people, we can hardly think of their replacement in the near future in the absence of viable alternatives. The democratic character of a city is reflected, by and large, in its transport system, in which buses, trams, tube trains and other modes of mass transit are used by all classes of people, rich and poor alike. Given our background of lack of proper planuing and coordinated remedial steps in this sector, it does not seem easy to evolve such an orderly transport system.

Another important factor contributing to the traffic jam is the squatter hawkers whose burgeoning growth is a cause for concern for the traffic controllers. Recently, The Daily Star published a series of pictures of different areas of the city which showed in vivid light the enormity of the problem affecting city life. Running parallel to the chaotic situation of rickshaws and hawkers is the disconcerting and horrific rise in road accidents which seem to be a daily affair. A feature of these road accidents is that they kill and the rate at which they do so is stunningly high. Sometimes it is said that road accidents in our country do not happen; rather they are made to happen. Perhaps there is some element of truth in the statement. For the observers, the conclusion seems inescapable that the roads and highways have turned into potential death traps for passengers making journeys along them and the engines of death include buses, trucks and particularly the drivers of these killer vehicles. Some of the factors readily identifiable as responsible for road accidents are rash driving, over-loading, ill-trained and sometimes over-worked drivers, grant of fitness certificates to defective vehicles, overtaking, violation of traffic rules and indifference and negligence in the enforcement of such rules: When these factors are, by and large overlooked by concerned quarters, it seems hatural to think that accidents are made to happen and such road accidents have become endemic in

In the opinion of many, the situation has deteriorated to such an extent that it is widely believed that such frequent road accidents are the end result of a system that has ostensively collapsed and nothing short of very stringent measures can be expected to help improve matters.

Lately we have seen some encouraging signs of government efforts to improve the traffic situation. Recently government reportedly took decisions to set up Highway Traffic Police Force and a separate police unit to check the rising trend of traffic accidents. The ministries and agencies concerned have also been instructed to immediately submit necessary project proposals to the Planning Commission for constructing flyovers and foot bridges and expansion and development of footpaths in the city to help reduce traffic jams. In the first phase, construction of flyovers at Mohakhali and Maghbazar will take precedence.

A Task Force has also been constituted by government with the State Minister for Planning as chairman to identify measures for the formulation of necessary projects to end traffic jams in the city, besides the purposes of coordi-

Clarifying the objective of his present mission, Ninian is learnt to have told the opposition leaders, 'a believer in democratic system, I would love to facilitate a fruitful dialogue between the country's opposition parties and the government side so that you could repair your democracy. He is also learnt to have requested them to cooperate with him to achieve the objective, especially by giving him 'a clear Opposition interpretation of the country's present political crisis'. •

Matiur Rahman Nizami of the Jamaat-e-Islami, Suranjit Sengupta of Ganotantri Party (GP) and Salauddin Kader Chowdhury of National Democratic Party (NDP) explained the reasons behind the opposition boycott of parliament proceedings in demand for constitutional provisions for holding general elections under a caretaker government.
