Gold medal for S M Ali handed over

By Staff Correspondent

In a simple but touching ceremony yesterday, the Jalalabad Association in Dhaka handed over the gold medal for lifetime achievement, awarded posthumously to S M Ali earlier this year, to his widow Nancy Ali.

While handing over the award president of the association E A Choudhury described late Ali, the founder-editor of The Daily Star, as an illustrious son who came from an equally illustrious family of Sylhet.

"We all pray for the salvation of the departed soul," he said while expressing his gratitude to Nancy Ali for coming to receive the award.

Held at the association's Kawran Bazar office the ceremony was attended by friends and relatives of the late editor and members of the association.

Faruk Ahmed Choudhury, an executive committee member of the association, pointed out that although late Ali received many accolades during his lifetime, he would have been happy to have received this award as it came from the people of his own locality.

Recalling his association with the late editor as a student at the Dhaka University, Choudhury, a former foreign secretary, expressed his appreciation that late Ali came back to Bangladesh.

"Within a very short time he was able to give a direction to journalism in the country. I think late S M Ali will be remembered as long as there is quality journalism in the country," he said.

Speaking on the occasion Syed Moazzem Ali, brother of the late editor, said: "This is a moment of pride for the family. If my father was alive today he would have been the happiest."

Describing his elder brother as a courageous man for returning home and taking up the challenging task of starting a newspaper, he recalled late Ali as saying, in a letter written sometime in 1992, that setting up of the newspaper was his "most satisfying thing I have done in my life. I am really enjoying it".
