Time to be vocal against hartal, says PM

Prime Minister Begum Khaleda Zia vesterday accused the Opposition of resorting to programmes of hartals and siege to disrupt the socio-economic development of the country, reports UNB.

She asked if the Opposi tion's hartal, gheroo and siege programmes will bring welfare to the people, and said: "Time has come to be vocal against these activities.

Begum Zia was addressing some 2,000 people from Kishoregani, including leaders and workers of the Awami League, JSD and Jamaat-e-Islami, who came to her Hare Road office lastnight to join the BNP.

BNP Secretary General and LGRD and Cooperatives Minister Abdus Salam Talukder Deputy Minister for Shipping A B M Zahidul Hug, Mohammad Akhtaruzzaman MP and local leaders Engineer Mohammad

Yusuf, Habibur Rahman Dayal and Syed Aminul Hug also spoke on the occasion.

The Prime Minister alleged that the Opposition did not want the BNP to implement any development work and the country to become self-reliant.

The Opposition had always tried and were still trying to confuse the people, she said. "But they are not getting any support. Begum Zia expressed her confidence that the people, who are witnessing the development work of the present government, would not give any credence to the Opposition claims.

She called upon the newcomers to strengthen the BNP for successful implementation of the government's programmes aimed at welfare of the people and overall progress of the country.

Accreditation policy

Accreditation of a full-time working journalist is a functional necessity and is required for discharge of his professional duties, particularly when he has to meet ministers and officials of va rious government depart ments.

Besides, in no way the circulation of a newspaper could be the basis for determining the number of journalists to be given accreditation. This is more true for English language newspapers which generally have comparatively less circulation than the Bengali news-

Information Secretary Dr Ekram Hossain, when contacted said the decision to formulate a new accreditation policy was taken with a good intention and was not intended to curtail the rights of journalists involved in the actual work of news gathering. He pointed out that there had been instances in the past when many journalists who were 'inactive' were issued accreditation cards.

Dr Ekram said it was possible that mistakes have been made in formulating the policy and assured "It can always be reviewed.

The Information Secretary also said that editors could come forward with suggestions.

GCO demands reduction of newsprint price

New govt unlikely in Nepal before Tuesday

KATMANDU, Nov 26: A new government is unlikely in Nepal before Tuesday as the governing Nepali Congress party, which finished behind the communists in the national elections, is still exploring the possibility to form a coalition government, reports AP.

The communists have emerged as the single largest group in a hung Parliament and are tipped to form the next government.

But the policy-making body of the Congress met in Kathmandu for 90 minutes on Sat urday to discuss ways to remain in power. But they failed to reach a consensus and decided to extend the meeting by a day, said Tara Nath Rana Bhatt, a party spokesman.

The Congress party's efforts. to retain power, however, suf fered a setback when the promonarchy National Democratic Party, which holds the balance of power in the Parliament, spurned its coalition offer on Friday. The Democratic Party decided to sit in the opposi-In the November 15 voting,

A party that forms a government must win a vote of confidence in Parliament within 30 days of being appointed by the King to retain power in the remote Himalayan land.

On Saturday, Manmohan Adhikary, the communist nom inee for prime minister, met with party's newly-elected lawmakers in Kathmandu.

Adhikary, 72, staked his claim to form a minority government during a meeting with the King on Thursday. The King is yet to formally invite any of the parties to form a government.

King Birendra's family ran a feudal Hindu kingdom in Nepal, bordering China and India, for hundreds of years until it became a constitutional monarchy in 1991 after a democratic revolution.

Dissension within the Congress led to the downfall of Prime Minister Girija Prasad Koirala's government in July this year, requiring elections 18 months ahead of schedule.

sition Abdus Samad Azad on the failed Commonwealth-brokered dialogue made at a press conference on November 24.

Salam Talukdar, who was a negotiator from the government side, alleged that the deputy opposition leader had propagated "unrealistic, untrue and motivated theory and information" in the name of giving details on the dialogue.

"They were not even a bit flexible although the government gave enough concession in the interest of the country and democracy," he said holding the Opposition's obstinacy responsible for failure of the dialogue. He further said that Samad

Azad had acted against what he called political culture by describing Commonwealth envoy Sir Ninian's proposal as the third proposal of the BNP. The BNP leader, however said that his party had agreed to accept Sir Ninian's proposal but the Opposition didn't. He warned that the Opposition would be held responsible for any anarchic situation due to the failure of the dialogue.

Criticising the Opposition for their prolonged boycott of Parliament, he said as members of Parliament "our main duties are to make laws, discuss the budget and take decisions on local, national and international problems."

Talukdar pointed out that the Opposition had refrained from carrying out their responsibilities towards the electorate.

He called upon the Opposition to return to Parliament for the sake of the country, people and democracy.

From Page 1 Col 7 dialogue between the exporters and government officials to remove the existing bottenecks.

The Commerce Ministry is yet to adequately identify the underlying factors behind the recent downward trend. Moreover, hardly any steps have been taken to back up the government's ambitious export-led growth strategy announced in the export policy of 1992.

"Not much has been done from the government's side to boost exports since the announcement of the export policy," pointed out a leading exporter. "The government is just paying lip service." The government is yet to initiate any significant measures to diversify the export base. Presently it is dominated by two items - ready-made garments (RMG) and jute. which together account for nearly three-quarters of the gross export value.

Whatever diversification has come about in recent years was primarily done under private sector initiative, observers pointed out.

The most significant aspect of the current trend of decline in exports is that the earnings from industrial commodities fell by 7.24 per cent while that of primary commodities marked an increase by 2.53 per

During July and August, export earnings from the garment sector dropped by 24.11 per cent, raw jute by 43.15 per cent and tea by a whopping 57.78 per cent. Only the frozen food, jute goods and leather exports did unexpectedly better and that, too, perhaps due to the initiatives of the exporters themselves.

Given this scenario, the observers noted, even a revised target of 3.1 billion dollars would be difficult to achieve during the remaining months of the current fiscal emphasis-

EU arms ban on Syria goes tomorrow

BRUSSELS, Nov 26: European Union foreign ministers will lift an eight-year-old embargo on sales of arms to Syria on Monday, following an improvement in relations, reports Reuter.

"The embargo will end," an EU diplomat said on Friday. The decision is due to be taken when ministers from the 12-nation bloc meet a Syrian government delegation on Monday evening after a regular EU session. The ban was imposed in 1986 after allegations of Syrian involvement in a thwarted attempt to smuggle explosives onto an El Al airliner. Other sanctions, such as bans on low-level diplomatic meetings, have been gradually lifted between 1987 and 1990, ing the broadening and diversification of the export base, the World Bank resident mission chief had said. "Our ongoing work on the industrial sector strategy shows that there is scope for Bangladesh to enter the export market for products like leather goods. ceramics, silk, sports equipment and electronic data processing." However, he added that the success of the export drive would critically depend on a number of factors; access to raw materials at competitive prices: credit to meeting the financial needs of the exporters; competitive labour costs; lower transaction costs through an efficient customs administration and duty drawback; removal of infrastructural constraints; and improving marketing and technical skills. However, all this would require reforms of the EPB and better coordination between different government ministries to remove the problems faced by the exporters. The restructuring initiative of the EPB has remained in the planning stage for the past several months. And even after the formation of a task force on exports headed by the Commerce Ministry, and cluding representatives of other ministries and the private sector, there appears to be little effective coordination among all sides. Out of 22 decisions taken in recent meetings of the task force not a single one has been implemented, complained a private sector member of the task force.

Only one partial meeting of the National Export Promotion Council, headed by the Prime Minister, was held over the past several months.

The private sector is now seeking the formation of a more effective forum to remove existing bottlenecks and to bring about policy initiatives to back up the export drive.
