

'Unite' against repression on women'

State Minister for Cultural Affairs Prof Jahan Ara Begum called upon the women's forum to build united resistance against repression on women, reports UNB.

'Other organisations should come forward to extend help to an endangered organisation', the state minister said while addressing a reception in the city yesterday organised by the National Women Federation (NWF).

'Code of conduct a must for political parties'

BNP Secretary General Abdul Salam Talukder has said that it was essential to have a code of conduct for the political parties and the politicians in the interest of giving democracy an institutional shape, reports BSS.

He was addressing as chief guest a discussion on 'code of conduct for the political parties and the politicians', organised by the Supreme Court unit of the Bangladesh Jatiyatabadi Anjibhi Forum (BJAF) at the Planning and Development Academy auditorium in the city on Monday.

He said that there should be a code of conduct for each and everyone entrusted with the responsibility of conducting elections. 'Election will not be fair if they are not honest even if the identity card system is introduced,' he added.

Talukder said that through careful scrutiny of the speeches and versions of the Prime Minister and the Leader of the Opposition it could be well-judged who was violating the code of conduct. He said that the main objective of the Opposition demands was not for holding of free and fair polls but to unsettle the government of Begum Khaleda Zia.
