Tehran for closer trade ties among Asian states

CALCUTTA, Jan 4: Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati urged Asian countries today to forge closer trade ties in a bid to become an important centre of global power," reports AFP.

Velayati, who is attending the Confederation of Indian Industries (CII) centenary celebrations in this eastern port city, said economic cooperation could also be extended to the new Central Asian nations.

There had already been "major efforts" by Iran, India. Turkey and China to strengthen ties with the former Soviet republics, he said, adding multilateral trade could be further boosted in the region to "revive old ties."

Velayati listed light and heavy industries, petrochemicals and textiles as the sectors in Kazakhstan, Uzbekistan and Turkmenistan that offered huge potential for cooperation.

"Asia has such a rich culture and (is) endowed with important resources such as oil and gas," he told some 1.500 dele gates from 43 countries at tending the three-day Cli meeting. India's largest-ever business conference,

"Iran can serve as a bridge between Central Asia, the Middle East and international waters... it is the most suitable location for exports and imports for Central Asia," he Velayati also called upon New Delhi to expand bilateral trade between India and Iran.

An Indo-Iranian gas pipeline project and joint ventures in several sectors such as lertilisers and railways could serve as a model in the region, the Iranian leader said.

Velayati, heading a highpowered delegation to the eighth meeting of the Indo-Iranian Joint Commission, has signed several agreements in New Delhi after his arrival to India on Monday.

He is among several key speakers at the CII meeting.
