US admn underlines importance of aid to Asia

WASHINGTON, Mar 15: The US administration underlined the importance of aid to Asia Tuesday, saying that continued support from Washington would help boost US exports. preserve security and encourage democracy, reports AFP.

"The assistance process, though very modest in this region as compared to others. provides critical elements we need" to achieve US strategic goals in the region. Assistant Secretary of State for East Asian and Pacific Affairs Winston Lord told a congressional committee.

Those goals have been defined by the administration as shared prosperity, shared strength and shared commitment to democratic values.

Lord said that as countries such as Taiwan, South Korea. and Thailand achieved economic development, aid had been scaled down or phased out entirely.

The administration is asking Congress for 281.5 million dollars in aid for Asia this year. less than three per cent of the "Even modest reductions in our requested levels will have a significant impact on our small programme." Lord warned.

The single largest recipient is the Philippines, slated to receive 73 million dollars, followed by Indonesia with 63.3 million, Cambodia with 39.5 million, and Mongolia 10.8 million.

The remaining three million dollars would go to regional programmes.

"Significant reductions in these levels will threaten to abdicate the United States' leadership position in the world and will seriously compromise US interests in the region." US'Agency for International Development (USAID) Deputy Assistant Administrator Linda Morse told the hearing.

While the economies of some of the most repressive regimes.

Several members of Congress have said they are unhappy about the United States providing aid to repressive governments with a poor human rights record.

But Lord argued that the best way to improve matters was for the United States to remain engaged and support programmes that would ultimately improve matters.

He cited Mongolia as a prime example of the need for US aid programmes in Asia. saying "the US assistance programme remains vital for Mongolia's continued democratisation and develop-

The United States has a major stake in seeing Mongolia succeed, Lord said, given its strategic position between Russia and China and "the importance of sending a strong message to China, Russia and others in the region that economic and political reforms are most effective when pursued in parallel."

Lord also reiterated that Washington would not accept the argument that human rights was essentially a West ern concept.

AP report adds: Because East Asian economies are doing well, the United States wants to wean the region away from aid and toward trade and investment for its future prosperity, the Clinton administration said Tuesday.

The 282 million dollar total allocated for East Asia and the Pacific in the fiscal year starting next October is just 2.65 per cent of the 10.5 billion dollars foreign aid budget, said Winston Lord, assistant secretary of state for the region.

But while admittedly "extremely small," this is a fitting proportion "given the dynamic economies of the region," Lord told a US Senate Appropriations subcommittee. In fact, Thailand has made such progress in social and economic development that the US Agency for International Development is closing its aid programme there;
