SARAJEVO. Apr 11: New explosions and gunfire rattled Sarajevo on Tuesday, and fighting wracked front lines to the north of the Bosnian capital. reports AP.

The city's airport remained closed because besieging Bosnian Serbs refused to promise they would not shoot at airplanes, preventing a visit by international mediators. That illustrated the dominance of military activity over diplomacy as time runs out on a tattered four-month cease-fire agreement.

Several heavy explosions, possibly mortar shells, resounded through central Sarajevo overnight and early Tuesday. Small-arms and machine-gun fire rattled around one of the capital's most tense front lines at the city's Jewish cemetery, close to the city centre. There was no immediate word on casualties.

The United Nations has blamed mortar attacks on the city centre in recent days on the Serbs, and accused them of targetting civilian areas with heavy weapons that have been banned from the Sarajevo area for more than a year.

On Monday, the government banned all public gatherings in the city as a precaution. In February 1994, 68 people were killed at a market by a single mortar blast. The airport, Sarajevo's lifeline to the outside world, has been closed since the Serb

small-arms fire hit a US cargo plane on Saturday. Officials of the international community's so-called Contact Group -mediators from the United States, Russia, Britain, France and Germany -were expected in Sarajevo for new talks. But the closure of the airport prevented that.

The mediators also were expected in Belgrade this week to talk to Serbia's influential President Slobodan Milosevic.

Mediators have been unable to make progress on a negotiated end to three years of war during the cease-fire period, which formally ends May 1. Combatants have said they do not want to renew the agreement and the level of fighting in Bosnia has slowly increased.

UN spokesmen at headquarters in Zagreb, Croatia, on Tuesday reported increased fighting between the Muslimled government forces and Serbs on Mount Majevica in northeast Bosnia, and heavy shelling in the area of Tesani civilian areas in Sarajevo in north-central Bosnia.

The Bosnian Serb news agency SRNA claimed Serb forces had repulsed a government attempt to capture a communications tower on Majevica.

On Monday, UN spokesman Chris Gunness in Zagreb said two children had been killed when shells hit a school in government-held Tesani. He said the Bosnain Serb shelling appeared to be in retaliation for a government attack earlier Monday.

In the same area, the UN reported five civilians were wounded in Serb-held Teslic in an artillery attack by government forces. And Gunness said there was heavy fighting around Zepce between the Serbs and Bosnian Croats, who are allied with the government

Campaign against child obesity

SINGAPORE: Singapore has opened a new front in its war against obesity among children with a second campaign that steps out of school gyms, into the great outdoors, reports AP. Singapore's fondness for government-sponsored social campaigns reached classrooms in 1992 when the Trim and

Fit programme was started with a twin agenda: Regular physical activity during school time and proper nutrition in school gymnastics and aerobics. A total of 115 students aged nine to 14 signed up for the five-month programme to be conducted mainly at a sports complex. In the evenings, the kids and their parents will attend classes on nutrition and dietary habits.

Parents also are being targeted because children were found to be gaining weight during holiday's nullifying the success of the Trim and Fit programme at schools, said Peter Hoon of the Singapore Sports Council. The council is spearheading the new campaign with the help of education and health ministries.

The Trim and Fit programme has helped 4,044 overweight kids reach acceptable weight levels, according to the latest government survey in May 1994. Still, 41, 374 students remain obese, the survey said.

While the Trim and Fit programme was aimed at all fat children, Fit and Wit is only for students less than 40 per cent overweight because it requires them to do strenuous physical exercises. Fit and Wit is an acronym for Fitness Improvement Training and Weight Intervention.

> Newsmen take a dip over Fujimori's victory

LIMA: Javier Perez de Cuellar wasn't the only one to take a dunking in Peru's presidential elections. The staff of the leading opposition magazine took a dip Monday in front of the residential palace to make good on its word, reports AP.

The director of the opposition magazine Caretas had predicted President Alberto Fujimori wouldn't win re-election on the first-round of Peru's election process, and promised to bathe in the fountain in Lima's main plaza if he did.

Fujimori won hands down, posting more than 60 per cent of the vote in unofficial results to 22 per cent for Perez de Cuellar, the former UN secretary general.

Magazine director Enrique Zileri and six of the publication's reporters turned out Monday morning to get wet.

The only problem was the fountain was bone dry. But determined not to renege on a promise. Zileri ordered a tanker truck of water to the scene. "We are keeping our word with good humour," said jourhis inspection team "has come to the conclusion that Iraq has not provided the full and comprehensive disclosure of its past military biological programme nor accounted for items and materials acquired for this programme.

"With Iraq's failure to account for the use of these items and materials for legitimate purposes, the only conclusion that can be drawn is that there is a high risk that they have been purchased and used for a proscribed purpose - acquisition of biological warfare agents," the report said.

Ekues said his inspectors have received data from Iraq that allows monitoring of key sites that might produce germ warfare agents, even though the Iraq's information "varied from declaration to declaration to the point of contradiction."
