Rare blood group detected

By Staff Correspondent

A professor of the Institute of Post Graduate Medicine and Research (IPGMR) recently detected another case of rare blood group known as 'Bombay' phenotype.

Professor Mujibur Rahman of Blood Transfusion Department found this rare blood group in a 7-month-old girl child who was suffering from acute gastro enteritis, says a press release.

The 'Bombay' Oh group is peculiar both in red cells and in serum. Such cases were earlier reported from South India, Bengal and Uttar Pradesh.

Prof Rahman has detected five such cases so far in Bangladesh till date. Interestingly, all Oh phenotypes are female.

The girl child was referred to the Department of Blood Transfusion Centre as doctors in Shishu Hospital and Red Crescent Society failed to do proper blood grouping and crossmatching due to the presence of irregular antibody in the blood.

She is the youngest case to be detected as 'Bombay' phenotype in any part of the world.
