Russia favours indefinite extension of NPT

UNITED NATIONS, Apr 25: Lining up squarely with the United States, Russia urged the world's nations Monday to approve an unlimited, nostrings renewal of the treaty to block the spread of nuclear weapons, reports AP.

To do otherwise, said Russian Foreign Minister Andrei V Kozyrev, would mean "demolishing the foundation of international security."

Kozyrev spoke as a second week of debate opened in a historic, monthlong conference on the future of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

Some in the Third World want to attach conditions to extending the 25-year-old pact, making it contingent on moves by the big powers toward complete nuclear disarmament.

In response to such demands, Kozyrev told conference delegates that his government is committed to eventual abolition of nuclear arms, but he offered some "realistic" words: "It is impossible to get rid of nuclear weapons overnight. Elimination... is a costly process requiring a fulfillment of monu-

Earlier Monday, the chief delegate from Iraq, the world's best-known nuclear "cheat." sought to shift the focus to Israel, which is known to possess nuclear weapons but, he complained, "continues strongly to refute the very idea of acceding to the Non-Proliferation Treaty."

The treaty recognises five nuclear powers - the United States, Russia, Britain, France and China - and obligates its 173 other signatories to forever give up the possibility of nuclear arms.

in exchange, the nuclear powers are pledged to work towards total elimination of such weapons.

When it came into force in 1970, the treaty stipulated it would last 25 years, after which its member states would have to decide to extend it indefinitely, or for a fixed period or periods.

clear powers appear to have assembled a narrow majority in favour of indefinite, unconditional extension. A vote will take place at the conference's end, in mid-May.

Trying to enlarge that majority. Kozyrev - as US Vice President Al Gore did last week - sought to defuse complaints from the nonweapons states about the treaty's "inequalities."

"I would like to especially underline that the indefinite extension of the Non-Proliferation Treaty is not a mandate for an indefinite possession by the nuclear powers of their nuclear arsenals," the Russian foreign minister said.

He also cited recent accomplishments in US-Russian arms control: elimination of short and intermediate-range nuclear arms; reductions of nuclear arsenals under the START I treaty, and progress toward a comprehensive nuclear test ban.

"The nuclear arms race has been stopped and put in reverse," he said.

Indian troops besiege Kashmiri rebel position

SRINAGAR, Apr 25: Indian troops have closed in on a sacred town in Kashmir where Muslim guerillas have been holed up for more than a month, police said, reports Reuter. Soldiers and militants exchanged fire at the weekend after government forces entered the outskirts of Charere-Sharief 30 miles (50 km) from Srinagar, summer capital of India's Jammu and Kashmir state, they said late on Monday. A policeman was killed as edgy troops fired inadvertently on a police bus coming out of Charer-e-Sharief late on Sunday, officials said. Earlier militants attacked the troops in neighbouring Panzan village. Police forces as well as army and paramilitary troops are fighting a five-yearold separatist rebellion which has killed more than 17,000 people.

Government forces surrounded the holy town in early March after learning a large number of militants, both Kashmiris and foreigners, were there. The town is revered for its Mother Teresa a 'magician'?

NEW DELHI: A Hindu nun known for her fundamentalist views has been arrested in central India for calling Mother Teresa a "magician" and a secular Hindu politician a "maneater," newspapers reported vesterday, says AFP. Sadhvi Rithambara. a fiery leader of the militant Vishwa

Hindu Parishad (VHP) or World Hindu Council), attacked Mother Teresa during a speech in which she denounced Christian missionaries for allegedly converting Hindus. "Mother Teresa is a magician," The Pioneer and other newspapers quoted her as saying in Indore, a commercial city in Madhya Pradesh state. "Even if a single Hindu is converted. Christians will be wiped out (in India)". Rithambara delivered the provocative speech at a district where a Catholic nun was murdered on February 25 by three men, including an alleged leader of the Hindu-revivalist Bharatya Janata Party (BJP, or Indian People's Party).

Rithambara also dubbed Mulayam Singh Yadav, chief minister of the northern state of Uttar Pradesh, "a man-eater" for his sympathetic views on Muslims, the country's largest religious minority, the newspapers said.

'It's not as if we hand over a large sum of money and then say, go ahead and spend it as you like."

The House of Commons Public Accounts Committee's probe was sparked by a report last year over how 20 million pounds (32 million dollar) of public money a year was spent on the royal palaces. The report from the government spending watchdog The National Audit Office, said nearly two thirds of royal staff and courtiers were living rent-free in some of the 285 so-called "grace and favour residencies" in and around the palaces. Alan Williams, an opposition Labour party member of the committee, said parliament was entitled to know about public funds paid to the household. He said his efforts to understand royal finances had been hampered by confusing, evasive and inaccurate replies from palace officials. He questioned 819,000 pounds [1.3 million dollars] spent on furnishings and fixtures for the apartments of four senior royal staff. "The sum of money was provided to do necessary, basic work." Phillips said.
