Dhaka Day by Day

A Korean Actress's Concern for Social Welfare

by Fayza Haq

Being at the top means being surrounded by a lot of loneliness and anxiety," admits South Korean actress Hye Ja Kim, who was here in Dhaka for a few days. Lonely or not as a super star of TV serials, Hye Ja had a hectic schedule in the city. The trim-waisted 54-year-old actress came to Bangladesh on behalf of World Vision Korea to see to the running of the child survival projects in Dhaka and Khulna, for which she had donated $10,000. This money came from her income of writing on World Vision project around the world. The writings were based on her visits to African and Asian countries like Ethiopia, Somalia, Rwanda, Vietnam, Laos and China. She wrote about malnourished, diseased, war-torn and needy people. While making the documentary on Hazaribagh slum, Dhaka, she was accompanied by 4 TV crew members from Korea. The purpose of the film is to raise the awareness of the people of South Korea about the world's poor.

Hye Ja is an actress with 30 years experience, working mostly for TV. She has made 600 TV plays, and has been on the top of the chart of popularity for the last ten years. She is presently performing in the weekly TV serial "A Dairy of a Rural Family" which has been running with success for the last 10 years. This remains a favourite drama of the Korean immigrants as it reminds them of old Korean social values. The actress plays the role of a patient wife and a dutiful daughter-in-law. In this play three generations of Koreans are shown as living together contentedly. Her film "Late Autumn" won a Manila international award ten years ago. Her performance in a daily TV drama "What is Love?" has also won her acclaim in South Korea.

It was Hye Ja's childhood dream to be an actress. She has considerable experience in acting as a school and college student. She Hye Ja, who has had no drama school training herself before embarking on her career says, "Today acting is taught at the college and university level in South Korea."

Her busy schedule does not include any hobbies except for visiting art galleries. Her husband Lim Jong Chan, whom she met before her acting career, is a fabric exporter. Her 31-year-old son Hyunsub is a fabric designer while her 26-year-old daughter Goeun, a cello major, is a happily settled housewife in USA.

Hye Ja, who has made large donations for immunization, nutritional programme, blindness prevention and home made oral dehydration saline promotion programmes in Bangladesh, says with a bright smile, "I hope, some day, Bangladesh will be able to solve its problems of poverty and overcome its dependence on foreign aid."

Bonsu taught Business Research, Marketing Management and Human Resource Management and developed a collaborative project document on institution building with Larenstein International Agricultural College, Veip, The Netherlands. The Visiting Faculty appreciated IUBAT initiatives in various academic fields and assured full cooperation from Simon Fraser. Post and Telecommunications Minister Tariqul Islam said, the main aim of the politics of BNP is to change the lot of commonmen through implementing the production-oriented development programmes, reports UNB.

The minister was addressing as chief guest at a function of distributing the cheques of government grants and test relief (TR) among the different educational, religious and social organisations.

Countering the remarks of opposition leader, which undermined the relief and rehabilitation programmes for the tornado-affected people, he said, "as our opposition leader has been afflicted by political jaundice, the ongoing development activities are not visible to her, rather everything appears yellow in her eyes."

He said, the 12 crore people and the diplomats of foreign missions are the witness whether development is going on in the country or not.

"It is not a sign of sound mind of Awami League to take part in the coming general election with the fallen autocrats and the anti-liberation forces Jamaat who were earlier termed as war criminals," he said adding, "it is an attempt to capture power by any means."

Tariqul warned that the opposition leader is giving birth to a Frankenstein monster by going on entente with parties devoid of ideals.

Referring to her remark about the failure of Prime Minister Begum Khaleda Zia in realising water in the recent SAARC summit in India he said, it is Begum Khaleda Zia who for the first time has awakened the international conscience by raising the issue at the United Nations.

Tariqul Islam said, Farakka water crisis is a national problem, it is not possible to have a solution of it through whimsical rhetorics.

He termed the announcement of the opposition leader in the newspapers mere political eye-wash that if her party regains power then the 25 years treaty of servitude with India will not be renewed.

He urged the opposition leader to call strike and stage march of millions towards Farakka to build public opinion for the solution of the issue.

The minister added that only then it will reveal that you are really against the atrocity caused by India and have feeling for the people of this country.

Workshop on flood warning held

Bangladesh, India and Nepal decided that simple indicators would be developed to use as warning signals to mitigate the sufferings of people from flash floods, reports UNB.

The decision came from a two-day workshop on "Regional Cooperation on Flood Warning" held at BUET May 4-6.

Some 50 participants from India, Nepal and host Bangladesh, including academics, development workers and government officials, attended it.

Experts viewed that simple indicators should be used for operationalising them at the local level within a framework of regional cooperation.

The participants reached a consensus on starting a pilot project, which will be developed in the next six months, in collaboration with NGOs, educational and research institutions of the three countries.

The two areas that have been selected for that purpose are Dawki river (for Sylhet and Jyanta, Meghalaya) and Mechi river (for Jhapa, Nepal and Kishanganj, Bihar).

After this timeframe, all three countries will again sit together to plan on future development and actual implementation. This type of efforts are complementary to the existing national flood forecasting activities.

Disaster Forum, Resources Engineering Department of BUET and Duryog Nivaran South Asian Forum jointly organised the workshop.
