

Railway services to be modernised

Railway authorities are making train-journey quicker and comfortable providing chair-cars and sleeping berths in trains, reports UNB.

The arrangements are part of a comprehensive programme Bangladesh Railway has planned for upgrading its services to ensure speed and comfort for passengers.

A BR press release said yesterday all intercity trains would have chairs in "Shovon" class, chairs and sleeping berths in first and air-conditioned classes.

The railway coaches will have new sitting arrangements with more comfortable foams and reclining facilities, and the seats of air-conditioned class will be covered with fabulous cloths.

Under the new arrangements, the present buffet-car system will also be modernised and both hot and cold foods be served to the passengers.

The facilities will be first introduced in inter-city trains and then in the other mail, express and local trains.

All arrangements to implement the programmes will be made within next three to six months, said the release.

Meanwhile, railway authorities have already reduced the journey time of a number of trains of its eastern zone by 20 to 30 minutes, and also planned to reduce it further.

Enacting laws through ordn criticised

Participants at a seminar on "Legislation by Ordinance" were critical of the tendency of successive governments in Bangladesh to resort to enacting laws through ordinances rather than through Parliament, reports UNB.

Seventeen members of Parliament and political leaders from BNP, Awami League and Jamaat-e-Islami took part in the discussion at the seminar, organised by the Center for Analysis and Choice (CAC), at Hotel Sheraton on Saturday.

Col (Retd) Shaukat Ali of Awami League was the moderator while CAC Director Nazim Kamran Choudhury presented the keynote papers, said a press release yesterday.

The political leaders felt strongly that this till toward ordinances was the result of a lack of Parliamentary tradition in the country and the consequent dominance of the bureaucracy in state affairs. These factors, they said, emerged during pre-independence period and continued to influence law-making to this day.

They expressed the opinion that because of the absence of an appropriate democratic political culture, the bureaucracy sees the parliamentary law-making process "as an impediment to what it considers the bureaucracy's right to run the administration as it feels best for the nation."

On the other hand, whatever opportunities the country's parliamentarians have had of ensuring a change in this practice have not been utilized properly to attain the right parliamentary culture, the speakers observed.

The seminar was informed that when an ordinance subsequently appears in the House in the form of a bill, it is rarely discussed by the Members of Parliament. And even when such bills are discussed, the average time spent in discussion is about a day or less than two hours of debating time. Moreover, most ordinances relate to amendments of existing laws rather than to new legislation.

Almost all the participants were of the view that ordinances should be promulgated only in very exceptional circumstances and the tendency to bypass Parliament in law-making should be avoided to uphold its supremacy.

They suggested that the provision regarding promulgation of ordinances by the President may be retained in the Constitution with certain limitations while empowering the President to make decision on whether there really exists any situation that demands immediate legislation through an ordinance.

The discussants were very critical of subordinate legislation that the bureaucracy resorts to continuously by passing all scrutiny of the country's lawmakers themselves.
