Film '95 on BBC World, tomorrow 10:25 pm

With this year's Oscars nominations and winners now well publicised, Barry Norman with the benefit of hindsight, takes a second look at the world's most favoured and glitzy festival of film. Film 95's reporter Tom Brook goes behind the scenes of this glamorous event, watched in awe by millions of people across the world. This year, British films had a very good chance of picking up many of the major awards - foremost among them: Four Weddings and a Funeral and The Madness of King George. Hugh Grant and Nigel Hawthorne talked to Film '95 about their chances and expectations. Time Rice talked about his lures for The Lion King; some British animators displayed their Oscar winning style: Quentin Tarantino and John Travolta shared their experiences of Pulp Fiction and as well as a word or two from Mr and Mrs Tom Hanks, there is another chance to just how special the effects team created many of the scenes in Forrest Gump, the runaway hit with six Oscars. He goes behind the scenes at this year's Hollywood Oscars to talk to those who organise and manage this annual showbusiness spectacular. Among the stars and other cinematic luminaries, Barry meets Tom Hanks, Hugh V Grant, Nigel Hawthorne, Rosemary Harris, Miranda Richardson, Elton John, Richard Curtis and Michael Grade, Chief Executive of Channel Four, one of Britain's major film financiers.
