Bangladesh tea facing competition in domestic market

From Nurul Alam

CHITTAGONG, Aug 24: Bangladesh tea, battling for survival, is now facing competition in the domestic market with Kenyan tea imported and marketed here by a prominent business house.

Bangladeshi tea is already facing stiff competition from Kenyan tea in the world export markets, market sources said.

A noted tea company Based in the port city, M M Ispahani which is a major exporter of Bangladeshi tea and owns a plantation, recently imported 13,000 kgs of Kenyan tea and is marketing it in the internal market.

Company sources under free-market economic policy, consumers have right to get best quality products. The company has planned to go for mass import of Kenyan tea depending on consumer's acceptability.

Talking to The Daily Star over telephone the director of the company Salman Ispahani said the imported Kenyan tea could produce strong liquor with bright and fresh quality preferred by the local consumers.

Meanwhile, release of the imported Kenyan ten into the home market sparked off mixed reaction in the business circles.

Chairman of the Chittagong chapter of Bangladeshiya Cha Sangsad (Tea Growers Association) Nasiruddin Bahadur said "such type of import of tea and selling in the local markets are nothing but a design to destroy our tea industry."

"We will take a move in our association meeting to be held in Dhaka on August 27 to stop such import of Kenyan tea," Bahadur said.

"If foreign tea is imported in large scale and released in the home market then it is sure to threaten the existence of our tea" he said, adding "such import taking advantage of free-market economy will hamper the country's interests".

A trade official of state-owned Bangladesh Tea Board seeking anonymity, said "we cannot encouraged importation of tea for selling in the local market and we may raise objection against it as our tea industry may be pushed into a crisis."

The official said "it seems contradictory as tea is imported while the government is trying to explore markets for Bangladesh tea by sending delegations abroad and the growers campaigning for raising sale of their tea in the home market also."

Chairman of Bangladesh Tea Board Brigadier Moqbul Ahmed said "foreign tea can be imported by any company if allowed by policy of the government."

"But at this moment I cannot comment anything more as I should look into the matter deeply" he said.

Privatisation programme suffers delays in Sri Lanka

COLOMBO, Aug 24: Sri Lanka's much vaunted privatisation programme has suffered delays and some of it may be poorly timed, but as far as foreign investors are concerned, the government is making all the right signals, says Reuter.

"Anticipation of privatisations is one of the major attractions Colombo has for foreign investors," Edmund Brandt, head of research at HDF Securities, said on Wednesday.

During the next three months, the government is due to privatise an investment company and four plantation management firms, selling a total of 26 million shares on the exchange.

The plantation reforms have been described as the single largest privatisation in the agriculture sector anywhere in the world.

"Three years from now, privatisations will have expanded market capitalisation by about two to three times," Brandt said. Market capitalisation on Tuesday was 117 billion rupees (2.34 billion US dollars).

The government is selling a 40.8 per cent stake, or 10 million shares, in capital development and investment co, a venture capital firm. The sale is due in early September at a minimum share price of 40 rupees (80 US cents).

"We are talking to three firms from India and Europe," said Mono Tittawella of Lanka Securities, the sponsoring broker," each one has shown interest in taking the entire tranche."

The issue is being underwritten by Merchant Bank of Sri Lanka.

While brokers agree it would be easy to find a strategic partner for the investment company, sceptics say the plantation privatisations may not be fully subscribed.

Bogawantalaw Plantations Ltd and Kotagala Plantations Ltd are due to come on the market with four million shares each, at a par value of 10 rupees (20 cents), in late September.

Agalawatte Plantations Ltd and Kegalle Plantations Ltd, also with four million shares each, are due in mid-October.

"The extended sluggishness in the market has left local investors up to their gills in shares and foreigners may not be interested as these are in the high-risk agriculture sector," said an analyst who declined to be identified.

'US should remain chief supplier of corn to Asia'

WASHINGTON, Aug 24: The United States should remain the chief supplier of corn to Asia, filling the gap left by China's withdrawal from the grain export market, Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said Wednesday, reports AP.

Those corn sales, Glickman told reporters, should provide one of several opportunities for a growth in US farm exports to China, Japan, Korea Malaysia, Singapore, Vietnam and other countries.

Glickman made the comments in discussing his recent trip to Asia, which he had to cut short because of the death of an uncle.

I came away from Asia more committed than ever to achieving our goal of expanding our agriculture exports by 50 per cent by the year 2000," Glickman said.

That would require an increase from dlrs 44 billion in 1994 to dlrs 65 billion by the turn of the century. Glickman said Asia, with booming populations and economic growth, could account for two-thirds of the increase in exports by 2000. Asia already buys 40 per cent of US agricultural exports.
