

HEN you are thinking of a tiger, it comes to you not only as a mighty striped animal but also with the myth, stories, aggressiveness behind it. And when you are after tigers in their native areas your mind must always be front by the side of a forest pre-occupied with the guard, and my remaining thought of the presence of comrades were following us this huge cat. All of your sen- at a distance of ten metres. sory organs become alert in One of them got stuck in the highest degree, not only mud, so we made a halt while while you are negotiating enjoying his dilemma. We with deep dense goran bush didn't notice our forest guard or typha grass in Sundarbans advance in the direction of meadows, it also haunts you the hudo shrub. Suddenly we during your leisure time heard an unusual noise which a rest house. are increased to such a The forest guard was also height that even very minor trembling. My friend, who events may shatter your bal- was still stuck in the mud. ance completely. Later, when started to scream at the top you are out of the grim of his voice. On his face was shadow of jungle shock .the the expression of total fear. events may appear to you as table stories but at those a horrifying one.

walking through the Sundarban forest with four comrades, two of them carried four rifles on their shoulders. The area Hilshamari lies almost in the middle the Suntrees. The Sundari trees have The Sundarbans have some effective weapons to restrict thought human interference. Besides Sundari and Kewra, the undergrowths like Hental Of them all I dislike two out of a board meeting that voted him chair and chief executive officer of the Philippine Airlines at the Manila Peninsula Hotel in file but controversial business magnate of Chinese descent.

already owns a string of businesses in the Philippines and

For Lucio Tan. a low-pro-

January.

day in the office.

HERE was no trace of excitement on his tace when he came

by Khasru Choudhury

when you rest in a boat or in broke the silence of the jun-Sensitivity of the organs my heart jump up in fear.

furny memories. It can be the event was a simple one. the good subject of many As we were advancing through the sulas a red jungle moments your experience is fowl was probably trying to catch some crabs. As it had One fine morning I was no intention to draw our attention it just hid itself in the hudo bush. Our forest guard had unknowingly stepped on it, making it frightened. The weary cock inorder to get rid-of us, broke out of its darbans. The forest is densely cover like a moving bullet covered by Sundari and Gewa crocking and beating its wings, which produced a terlong, hard and pointed rifying sound. After we disbreathing roots and it is very covered what had actually all difficult to walk on these. of us started to laugh. What a relief it was not a tiger, as we

One evening, on that same the bank and could hear the

We were drifting in silence. I lit my torch in the direction of the left bank and it fell upon two glowing eyes. A moment later we heard a splash, which meant that the animal must have jumped into the lake. Fearing a lurking tiger had jumped into the water we cried to the boot barge for peaceful sleep at night. The barge was anchored merely ten feet from the bank of Chorabetmore river and was three feet above the water level. We were all engrossed in interesting tiger stories.

Although it was a January night there had been a little rain in the evening and the of the camp area. The tiger had not tried to secure any human prey but it once tried to catch a chicken from beneath a kitchen platform while the cook was on his prev duty.

This information made us a little worried since the doors and windows of our cabins did not have any shut chitra, had fallen victim while sleeping. I did not know what to do and the only thought that came to me was the tiger should flee with his

After some moments my brain started to work.lt occured to me that the tiger would no take so much time to drag the body out. Moreover. It would have to step over others in order to reach Chinmoy Da. Also I did not hear any sounds before. although some man-eating tiger kill silently.

Very slowly I opened my eyelids expecting to see a horrifying scene. I The room was lit by the moon and didn't see anything unusual but the sound could be still heard.. Meanwhile, the rest of my companion's were also iwakened by the noise. mustered enough courage to look at Chinmoy da. I caught hold of his left arm and shook it violently to wake him up. Finally he woke up to tell his story:

in his dream he felt the tigress board the barge, select him as its prey, and bury its canine teeth into his throat. He was so frightened that he lost courage to even scream. The agonised sound which we heard, came out automatically - he knew nothing about that.

I think our tiger stories and persisting supernatural atmosphere were the main culprits for his immense after hearing his story, all of us laughed a good deal. But I must admit that it is not at all unusual for a man entering a tiger-infested forest like Sundarban to be struck by jungle shock.

later I woke up to some unusual frightful sounds. It Tasvel sounded like an animal trying to drag out one of my companions. As the sound came from my right I assumed that it was Mr Chinmoy Mutsuddy, Dubai Airport to increase capacity: Dubai's associate editor of weekly Biairport plans to increase cargo handling capacity by 40 per cent to 350,000 tonnes within the next two years, said > the airports cargo terminal. As part of the expansion plans, a dedicated courier facility would be built in the cargo terminal. To meet steadily growing demand a second cargo agents building would be crected, with construction due to begin early next year.

Sultan Saced bin Nasser Al Mansoury, director general of

-BD Shipping Times

New Liner Service: Atlantic Conbulk services. a new liner service between Montreal and Antwerp was due to be introduced in mid-June offering departures at 17 days intervals.

It will accept containers and conventional breakbulk and bulk. Atlanta ship management SA: Freiburg Switzerland is the managing agent.

BD Shipping Times

UASC announces losses: The United Arab Shipping Company of Saudi Arabia has announced losses of between USD 30 and 40 million for 1994 The results compare with losses of USD 73 million in 1993 and around 33 million in 1992. Officials say that the results are due to a decline in shipping rates, world recession and growing competition.

Sharjah Cargo up: The amount of cargo handling at Sharjah International Airport rose 23% from 17.402.904 kg to 22.679.744 kg during March this year compared with March 1994. The airport broke its existing record in sea/air freight during the same period, with nearly 23,000 tons being handled during the month.

Beijing to think about EU route: China is being urged by international airlines flying to Europe from Hongkong to thange its new routing system, which has increased flying times and costs. The new routing system introduced by Chinese authorities to deal with the ever increasing traffic over southern China has added 84 km more to Europebound airlines leaving Hongkong.

Airlines company said that the new west-only route had made it more difficult to guarantee that flights would be non stop. The new air route meant about 15 minutes more flying time and atleast 2,000kg more of fuel must be car-—BD Shipping Times Anointment of a new Thai airbus: The anointment of the 6th Thai Airways International Public Company's Airbus A330-300 was held at the Ramp of the domestic terminal of Bangkok Airport. Following the anointment, a demonstration flight was organized, flying the deputy prime minister. THAI president etc.

Terror Moments

tressed chital doe.

gle. I missed a beat and felt

Later we discovered that tigers, crocodiles, wild boars, trip, we went on a canoe ride. and venomous snakes; there As we didn't have any intenare the breathing roots of tion to get off the boat, we were carried some torchlights only. As we passed we Horgaza and loose mud-traps. could only see the outline of the forest and the rest fell in things, garan bush and shulas complete darkness. We were (breathing roots) of Sundari at distance of ten feet from In those areas we came crickets, owls, night guard, across both. I was in the distance alarm call of a dis-man to turn the boat the towards mild stream. As we frantically lit our torches.our boatman suddenly recognised the animal to be a huge crocodile and. Tiger stories can sometimes be very engaging if narrated by a good story teller in favourable atmosphere. One day we settled ourselves on a overcast cloud made the night warm. As the Khulna Newsprint mills operational office of chorabetwnore gave us permission and accommodation for night halt in their periphery, they also informed us that a tigress had dropped one of its cubs. The tigress was therefore a regular visitor with her offspring ters. Our distance of ten feet from the shore was no barrier for the man-eater. Mr Karim, honourary consultant of WWF and a conservationist was narrating a story about the Sundarban man-eaters.

At 11 o'clock in the night we decided to cal it a day. Within minutes we all fell asleep.But about half-an-hour

Jaisalmer: A Desert City

by Fyyaz Shahnoor

HE Advanced Learners dictionary defines the word desert as "an area of land without trees or water, often covered with sand": A dictionary seldom lies, vet unfortunately it also fails to depict the true imagery that a word may convey. If you've always been fascinated by the word desert and believe that actual experience is far better than mere descriptions, than Jaisalmer in Rajasthan is the Situated in the far western tip of India, Jaisalmer lies in the midst of the Great Indian Desert. Jaisalmer is no typical deservency bewas once place for you.

rounding a small hill. A quiet arrogance emanates from it's cobbled streets and narrow alleys. Most of the houses are pale two storeyed buildings with intricate patterns adorning the entrances. These patterns on stone are called Jaffri and are the speciality of local artisans whose trade has been handed down from generation to generation for more than 500 years. The only colorful aspect of the city are it's local inhabitants. Local men wear flashy turbans in direct contrast with their grevishwhite dhuti's and women decorate themselves with heav steel arm bands and places, shrines and temples are scattered in all directions. However the place has been able to retain it's impression of antiquity.

Stone seems to be the most popular building materials of the past. The total lack of greenery gives one an eerie feeling amidst the stone houses and streets. The places to visit here are the Rang Mahal, the Moti Mahal and the Sarbattam Bilash.

From the verandas of the Rang Mahal you can get a breathtaking birds eye view of the city bellow. These Mahals are a fusion of small rooms creating a very confusing maze. The unmindful

(where the Maharaja would sit) the air is very cool. Just sitting there gives one a sense of power and pride that man has indeed, to a certain extent, been able to conquer nature. Apart from the ancient stones. At the very center relics the true attraction of Jaisalmer lies in it's desert! sand dunes. An hour's ride to the west on a jeep will take you there. If you want you can stop at the occasional village with it's low mud huts huddled close together as if shrinking away in shvness from the sun. Leaving the village as you go further west you make a striking discovery. The villages suddenly cease to exist. The shrubs become fewer and far between. At this point you might catch the occasional glimpse of a sand dune. Then a time comes when all you can see is sand. If you feel really adventurous you can stop the jeep and finish the remaining part of your journey on camel. You are sure to find men with camels waiting on the road side. The Indian camel has one hump and can carry two persons. The camel kafela will take you through the sand dunes at a leisurely pace. You will surely be stunned by the vast expanse of uninhabited dunes. It is a wonderful experience to watch the sand waves which are blown in by wind. In local lingo these waves are called Barkhan . Finally the sam sand dunes come into view. These dunes are very high and they look as if some gigantic hand has just scooped up some sand in order to build them. It's great fun to run up and down the craters. A lot of tourists are seen roaming around here. If the journey hasn't already drained all your energy out then start walking until you find yourself stranded on a lone sand dune.Lie there on the cool sand and watch the sun go down. It's amazing to see the color of the sand change as the sun slowly sets.

If you arrive early then you can hire some camels and go on a small safari. The camel herders will take you along the sand dunes until you reach the India-Pakistan border. If you are a very romantic then I'm sure you would like to spend a night at the sam sand dunes. A tourist lodge has been built in the middle of no-where, by the government. It boasts all modern conveniences includ-

Jaisalmer is a relatively new tourist spot. The could not be just another company not even for someone of Mr Tan's obvious business acumen. Asia's first airline is now arguably the region's most troubled air transport firm, its rise and fall almost running parallel to the changing fortunes of the Philippines itself, which until extra hands. a few years ago was generally considered as the sick man Philippine National Bank The task of keeping the Bank of the Philippines (DBP) planes of the nation's ailing, and the Armed Forces of the flag carrier flying could Philippines' Retirement prove the toughest challenge Services and Benefits System ever faced by a man whose (AFP-RSBS) will restore govlegendary rags-to-riches ernment control of the airstory enabled him to build up line, which has been in pria highly diversified business conglomerate and a reputation in some sectors of having the fabled Midas' touch. Mr Tan, who took over PAL's reins as head of PR Holdings Incorporated, a consortium that owns 67 per cent of the airline, faces not only stiff market competition bút also a pocket rebellion in the board, three hostile workers' unions and an apparently uneven playing field laid down by a government caught in the flux of liberalizing the aviation industry.

His first and most pressing assignment is to turn around a company which reg- Washington. istered US$ 10.4 billion (P270 billion) in losses in the last 10 years and is projected to lose at least US$3 billion more '(P69 billion) in the next two years.

To stave off further losses, management and the workthe new PAL chair has asked the stockholders to infuse P2.5 billion (US$ 96.15 million) in fresh money to improve the airline's services and make it competitive, repay loans and meet maturing obligations as part of its P3.2billion (US$123 million five-year expansion programme.

Also part of Mr Tan's rescue plan is the raising of P8 billion (US$ 307 million) to pay the retirement benefits of at least 3,000 employees. PAL — a favourite dumping ground for political appointees when it was in government's hands — has a staff

by Casiano Mayor

Magnate Launches Rescue Mission for Asia's First Airline

'It's not only the competition that hurts PAL. What hurts most are the unfair regulations imposed by government' of 14,000 employees, which is considered much too big for its needs.

A study by a London financial consultancy firm, which was commissioned by PAL, in other parts of the world, recommended early retiremight have been just another 5,000 workers and the reshuffling of 3,000 others to But the Philippine Airlines improve productivity and avoid duplication of work. It pointed out that an airline the size of PAL needs only 4,000 workers.

Certainty that the unions will oppose any retrenchment moves has made management go slow on any move to get rid of the 10,000 or so

The move by the (PNB), the Development vate hands for only four PAL's three workers' union picketed in May infront of the airline's main office in Makati city, the Philippines' financial centre. to protest the hiring of 15 Malaysian pilots for four Boeing 747-400 jetliners while 26 Filipino pilots are being trained at Boeing's headquarters in Seattle, a warning as well to the new leadership not to cross the workers, thus, offering a glimpse of the potentially stormy relationship between ers' unions, which are wary of Mr Tan's "anti-labour" reputa-ous strikes looms as the three unions — for ground workers, pilots and flight attendants - renegotiate their collective bargaining agreements simultaneously this increase and benefits.

year and demand new wage fronts as well. Management's efforts to turn PAL from being a milking cow of political appointees into a profitable private company may be further slowed by the state policy to liberalize the airline

There is trouble in other

The spectre of more seri-

The picket appeared to be industry.

PAL officials have complained that President Fidel Ramos' Executive Order 219. which liberalizes the aviation industry, has not only exposed the flag carrier to open taking over a new company ment for between 3,000 and competition but also lessened its ability to compete fairly. With the "open skies" policy, the airline is no longer the country's only official flag carrier. At least two international airlines will be sharing that distinction.

Currently, PAL has domestic competition from four new airlines — Grand Air. Cebu Air, Silangan Air and Star Asia Airways. The entry of Pacific East Asia Cargo, the Federal Express, DHL and UPS courier services is also likely to cut into its cargo revenue.

"It's not only the competition that hurts PAL. What hurts most are the unfair regulations imposed by government. For instance, while opening the industry to free competition, the government wants PAL to take the unprofitable routes and give the prolitable ones to its competitors," said a close associate of Mr Tan.

"That's like telling PAL to commit suicide. If you liberalize an industry, you should leave its regulation to market forces and not throw in told Depthnews.

nonetheless.

monkey wrenches there," he fighting government on the issue. Even the usually critical newspapers have joined the airlines' clamour for government to get its hands off

"PAL's pleas for government to level the playing field are certainly valid and fair," wrote Manila newspaper columnist Ermin Garcia, Jr. "Lucio Tan may not be the epitome of an ideal Filipino industrialist who should control PAL, but he is a Filipino is told to continue subsidizing unprofitable domestic cially stronger competitors to eat up whatever market share it has in profitable routes, without any stake in subsidized routes, is down-

Industrialist Enrique

right unfair." he added routes, but to allow its finan-

"It is bad enough that PAL the local airline industry.

Mr Tan is not alone in Certainty that the unions will oppose any retrenchment moves has made management go slow on any move to get rid of the 10,000 or so extra hands.

Zobel agrees: "If the government believes that the open skies' policy is best for the Filipino people, well and good. It should pursue the policy to the maximum, irrespective of whoever gets aflected. At the same time, however, it must totally free PAL to compete with newer rivals, who have fewer restrictions on their operations."

"The government...must let go of PAL once and for all. This is the first step on the way to recovery. Let PAL flounder or fly in the face of new competition. Let it fend for itself," he added.

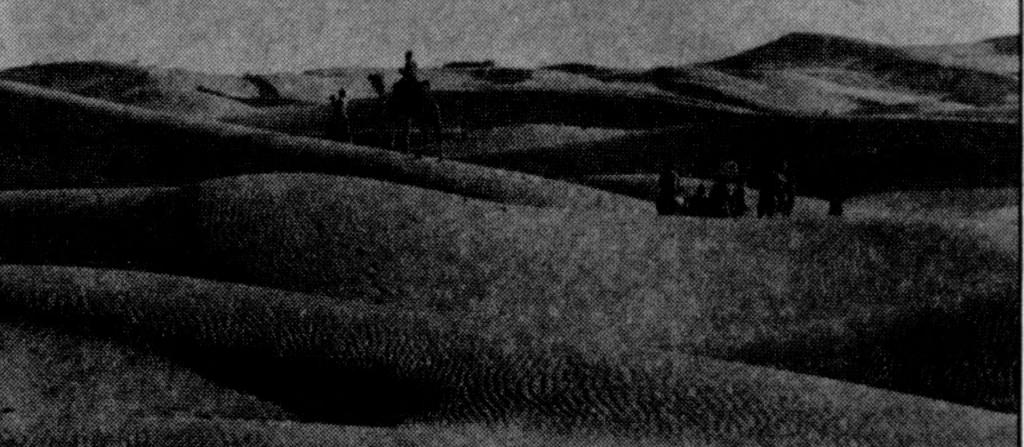

While Mr Tan seemingly can only anticipate more trouble ahead, at least in the near future, the few steps he has taken so far to bail out the troubled airline appear to be paying off. Company officials said since Mr Tan took over PAUs helm in January the nation's flag carrier has saved some US$ 52 million from aircraft purchases, new negotiations of lease con tracts and other cost-cutting measures.

In April, the new man agement finalized the purchase of a brand new Boeing 717-400 at US$ 18 million, a price less than what was paid for two of the same aircraft bought by the previous management in 1993. Terms of negotiated leases contracted by the new management on four B747-200 aircraft saved the company US$ 705.228 on monthly lease payments.

To save on operating costs, the company has de cided to reduce flying time and cut down on parking. maintenance and fuel costs from its international routes It has reduced the B747's sit ting capacity from 439 to 390 to allow for more legroom, accommodate more cargoes and be able to fly non-stop to the United States West Coast without a stopover in Honolulu, which costs about US$ 20,000 per land-

Other measures include the re-negotiation of tow truck fees at US$18 million less than the price set by previous airline officials and the use of locally-sourced airplane toilet, sanitizing chemicals, which the previous management bought from the US at a price tenfold higher.

But the man, who legend says peddled pans and kettles on the streets of Cebu City on his way to the top of the business ladder, is not out of the woods yet despite these modest accomplishments. Flying Asia's oldest flag carrier is likely to be the toughest challenge he has faced so far. Depthnews Asia.

the dwelling place of Maharajas. Travel weary bedouins used to grace it's market places and fort. Today it is a popular tourist spot and boasts a rich cultural and architectural heritage.

The season to visit Jaisalmer is from January to March. At that time the weather is agreeable and different cultural festivals are held by the local inhabitants. To reach Jaisalmer you have to go from Delhi through Jaipur and Jodhpur. The journey can be made both by bus and train. The city many hotels, so accommodation should not be a problem. You can contact one of the many tourist services in the city.who offer different sightseeing packages at various price ranges.

The city itself is very small. It is situated on an uneven stretch of land surnecklares.

The fort of Jaisalmer is situated at the top of the hill. People lovingly call it Shonar Kella after the movie that Sattyajit made on this very same location. This ancient relic was built in the 12th century by Maharaja Rai Jaisal. He was a member of the Bhatti Rajpur sect. He had built this fort after being banished from his original capital Lodhrua by Mohammed Gori.

As you enter the fort the massive wooden doors will overwhelm your sense of perception. You will be marveled at the intricately carved designs on it's outer rim. Through the doors a narrow winding path will lead you to the main courtyard. There, within the circular constraint of the gigantic fort walls you will find a bustling city. Hotels, houses, market tourist can easily lose himself in this labyrinth. After that you might want to try the Jain and Vishnu Mandirs which are close by. Or you could try your hand at haggling with the local shopkeepers who keep a diverse range of semi-precious stones, jewellery, leatherwear and clothing. After the fort you can visit the "Chhatris". An enervating walk of about a mile will get you there. These are actually dome like formations (with striking similarity to umbrellas) built upon another hill. It is here that the ancient Maharaja's used to take shelter from the scorching heat of a summer noon. These simple structures are ingeniously constructed. The architectural design is such that air can flow smoothly in between the pillars loosing heat as it passes through the

ing a bar,

Rajasthan Tourist Authority is actively promoting it as a major tourist attraction. So if you want to avoid the horde of tourists that are soon going to mar it's sanctity, you better start soon.