'Highlight women's development'

By Staff Correspondent

The Bangladesh Nari Progoti Sangha (BNPS), an association of women for progress, yesterday called on journalists to treat issues concerning women in a more positive light in the media.

The appeal was made during an informal discussion session with members of the press, organised by BNPS at its Dhanmondi office yesterday afternoon.

"Usually, negative issues, such as crimes committed against women, where the blame is often attributed to the victims, are highlighted in our media. Whereas, positive issues, particularly those relating to women's development, are down-played, if reported at all. There is an urgent need for changing this sort of attitude," Rokeya Kabir, executive director of BNPS said.
