the capital in the past month.

"Domestic flights have been suspended since Wednesday until further notice," said HMC Nimalsiri, assistant director Department of Civil Aviation.

Nine private domestic airlines operate from the Ratmalana airfield in the city's southern suburb, flying foreigners and locals to tourists destinations in the country.

Some flying schools operate planes and helicopters from the airfield, about 15 kilometres (9 miles) from downtown. It is also used by the air force, which guards it.

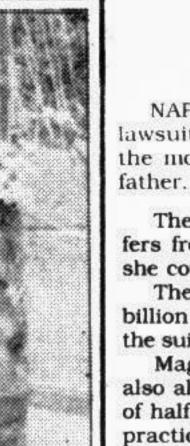

Nimalsiri said the government would review the situation at the next security council meeting, which is chaired by President Chandrika Kumaratunga, before a decision is taken to lift the ban.

Police this week uncovered a plot by the rebels to hijack or hire a private aircraft and bomb a building in the capital, probably the parliament. The information was obtained from rebel suspects arrested in the capital.

Another AFP report adds: Tamil Tiger rebels today remained silent on the crash of an air force transport plane off Sri Lanka's western coast. killing all 75 people on board, Tamil sources said.

70m-year-old fossil

LONDON: French scientists reported on Thursday they had found a 70 million-year-old fossil belonging to a bird that may have been as big as the modern ostrich, reports

And they said some fossil eggs, found in southern France and previously assigned to dinosaurs, could actually be bird eggs.

In a letter to the weekly magazine Nature, the four scientists said the fossil was part of a bird's pelvis.

"Although the proportions of the complete skeleton cannot be reconstructed, there is no doubt that is was indeed large," they said.

The scientists, from Paris, Vitrolles and France's dinosaur museum, suggested a possible rethink over the discovery of hundreds of thousands of fossilised dinosaur

"The assumption that all those eggs are dinosaur eggs should be treated with caution," they wrote.

Settlement of unusual mistake

NAPLES. Italy: A fertility doctor Wednesday settled a lawsuit brought by parents who charged he impregnated the mother with the sperm of a stranger rather than the father, reports AP.

The girl born from the procedure, Giada Minucci, suffers from thalassemia, a congenital form of anemia which she could not have caught from her parents.

The doctor, Raffaele Magli, agreed to pay the parents 1 billion lire (620,00 dollars) in exchange for their dropping the suit.

Magli was indicted criminally in the case. Prosecutors also alleged he may have created "hundreds or thousands" of half-siblings by using sperm from only two donors in his practice.

He was charged with fraud and aggravated personal in-

The father of Giada, who was conceived five years ago, said they accepted the settlement to pay for her care. "We did it in the interests of the girl," said Roberto Minucci, according to the ANSA and AGI news agencies. Magli had contended that the mother, Maria Cristina. was impregnated in an extra-marital affair.

The case became symbolic of Italy's lack of laws regulating medically assisted pregnancies.
