European Commission (EC) delegation chief and Ambassador Michael Drury said at a workshop yesterday that development of rural towns would be the future focal point of the EC's development assistance in Bangladesh.

"The proposed study would try to answer certain strategic questions regarding the future role of rural towns in the economy of Bangladesh. To this end, rural development in terms of poverty alleviation, would be complemented with infrastructural development in the growing rural towns economy" said Drury, the European Union's representative in Dhaka. He was addressing a day-long stake-holders' workshop held at Bangladesh Institute of Development Studies in the city.

Director

Alamgir Farouq Chowdhury, Secretary, Local Government Division inaugurated the workshop aimed at launching a study on the development needs of rural towns which was participated by officials of government departments concerned representatives of donor agencies. NGOs and private sector bodies, as well as members of rural town bodies.

A Farouq Chowdhury said. "The rural towns are essential instruments in the future development of the country. Underscoring the need to restrain rural-urban migration and to build adequate infrastructure, the Local Government Secretary said, "Coordination between the government and donors in developing these areas was necessary to prevent overlapping and wasteful duplication of programmes."

Chowdhury also stressed institution-building for local decision-making.

In his opening remarks. Ambassador Drury said that the EC was initiating the "comprehensive" study in the framework of the current EC Bangladesh Cooperation Strategy.
