CDS: An Intermediary and Support Organisation

II T TARI Kishore Chakma, a child born in 1960 is now a full blooded youth of thirty. It tock only one very incident of the sixties to cause a dramatic change in the life pattern of Hari and his genera tion. The Kaptai Hydro Elec-"tric Project ... has shaken the very root of their social fab ric; a living in complete disarray, a living that will never be the same again," narrates an endogenously devised documentary of Centre for Development Services (CDS). which captures a wealth of information and, by taking stock of the outcome of a envisage. "Our vision is a congenial society that will afford equitable opportunities for to help them work in a more all," says Omar Faruque effective manner," says Chowdhury, executive director of CDS.

policy regime, says what society and development they Chowdhury, his organisation's mission is to enhance capacity building of Private Voluntary Development Organisatio is (PVDOs) and community people, both urban and ruial, to effect positive change by providing needbased support, technical assistance and overview. In 1983, the year CDS came into being, a group of social workers with interest in common, felt for a na tional-level service NGO that could link dedicated regional groups and people's organisations with national and international governments and donor agencies. "We also realised that a national body was needed that could serve as a mediator and counsellor for both loca! groups and donors or government bodies Chowdhury. "Thus. CDS" uniqueness is, at its core, it To that end, continues is an intermediary support

PIONEER AND THE BEST BATIK IN BANGLADESH

GUP—BATIK

Produced by the village women, export quality GUP Batik is GUP Handicrafts include a great variety of artistic products

GONO UNNAYAN PROCHESTA (GUP)

13B/10B Babar Road, Block-B

Mohammadpur, Dhaka-1207

Bangladesh

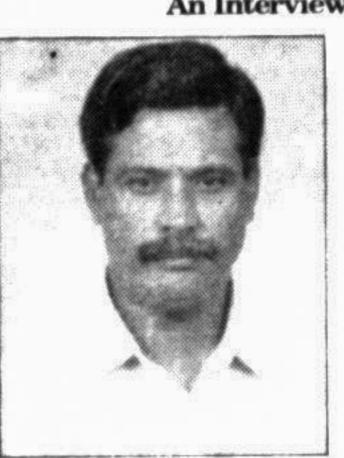

Tel: 813216, 324925

Fax: 880-02-813095

comfortable and elegance in all seasons.

equally useful for household and offices.

For more information please contact:

NGO, and as long as there are local-level development groups requesting assistance. CDS will be there to help them." adds Chowdhury while introducing CDS. As an intermediary and support organisation CDS works with and for the locallevel organisations who have

An Interview with the Executive Director of CDS by Rashed Mahmud Titumir enlisted as partners of CDS and with those CDS has been maintaining a network relationship. "We have found, in most cases, CDS partners do not have the proper skills or expertise, appropriate manpower or needed materials to manage their organisations." says Chowdhury, adding, "thus, the first and foremost role of CDS is to foster fledgling organisations to graduate into self-reliant. self-standing NGOs capable of independently managing local national and international activities. In translating those into reality. CDS provides technical support for institution building, capacity building, communication support service to help local-level organisation get informed of the latest developments, and financial support for different development activities. It has also demonstration units to test innovative ideas.

CDS believes in promotion of volunteerism and emphasises capacity building of local development organisations. "Our Village Development and Networking programme provides technical assistance in strengthening the management capabilities and institutional development process of local partner associations and in sharing community development issues and problems to enhance effective communication among NGOs," says Chowdhury.

property and sometimes lives and the threat to survival in the aftermath of flood until normal economic life resumes. Second, the longer ter n reversal of development gains and economic and paredness programme, implemented by the NGO, Rangpur Dinajpur Rural Service (RDRS), sought to address both problems in four vulnerable districts of northwest Bangladesh. By developing both the physical and skills capacity of local associations of the poor to cope with natural disaster, the one-year project has significantly strengthened the community's ability to cope

District is one of over 100 assisted with a new approach to disaster preparedness. At a meeting held outside their new community grain store.

the Union Federation (a local organisation of landless groups) were discussing how they had worked during recer t flood and drought disaster and how they would man-

Chairman Golam Mostafa

believed the training and leadership, the disaster volunteers received was critical in mobilising people to prepare for impending flood and in post-flood relief. "This time, there was less panic because people were prepared and knew what action to take when the situation became secous. Previously.

fear and uncertainty caused as much problem as the rising water themselves"

Equipped with improved early-warning system and of plans of action to communicate the danger and to give advice, the trained volunteers proved their worth in evacuation. They also took the lead in distributing to the most deserving cases the small stocks of relief supplies (polythene sheets, plastic cor.tainers, oral rehydration solution, foodgrains, and biscuits) the Federation had stored in readiness, and in supervising some of the re-

The white painted community grainstores are the most obvious and sustainable benefit of the project. Built on raised land owned by the Federation near the local market, these 18'x25' buildings not only carry a buffer stock of relief materials but also store 30 tonnes of grain to provide food and seed to help agriculture recover quickly from the next flood.

This multipurpose building also acts as a temporary flood shelter and Federation office and small meeting room. In normal conditions, the trained Federation leadership habilitation works.

age in future.

Ghorial Danga Union in Rajarhat Thana of Kurigram with future threats.

An ECHO Disaster Pre-

social rehabilitation.

(DS has been operating its tion and settling disputes by family planning section for establishing village committhe last decade with 14 parttees empowered with the ners' agency projects and a knowledge of legal rights and fifteenth directly managed by participatory women's CDS. Health, family planning and related development rights," adds Chowdhury. services have been made available through the said or-under 94 unions of 20 thanas in 20 districts of the country. In order to uphold justice and thereby ensure the enforcement of human rights and have a society free from exploitation, CDS started village level free legal assistance programme since 1991 in tive director of CDS.

Knowing fully well of the influence of television now-adays. CDS is now running a media campaign on genderrelated issues to raise awareness. "The goal is to wipe out long-standing sexist mentalities and plant the seed of pro-human, pro-development ideologies," says the execu-concept for the development agencies - Shramadana which involves the voluntary donation and sharing of people's resources, especially their time, thoughts and physical efforts. Elaborating, CDS chief executive says, the community accomplishes its objective of providing for public or private utilities and services by paying for it through levies or taxes or by the direct hiring of other people's labour. "Initially, it was difficult to make people understand or apply this concept." continues Chowdhury "after some time, they realise it brings fruit to every lages is an attempt to get local communities understand the issues and problems confronting them, so that their full potential could be utilised and their resource mobilised as a force within a total community development approach," says CDS chief. "We place emphasis on what people can achieve by utilisation and mobilisation of available, local resource, including their own-physical labour," adds Chowdhury.

Chowdhury strongly advocated that the people, especially the disadvantaged youth and women, should be provided equal opportunities for growth and fulfillment and they must be given due consideration as a valuable part of the community and should be involved in the local level planning and decision making process.

He also said that their role in the development process in the most vital and they should be involved as partners in progress. "Shramadana provide them a start by giving them opportunities to plan and participate in programmes that can utilise their skills. So, we need much more active interaction between the various segments of the civil society and government in all aspects from planning to implemention as none can still claim they have achieved what they want to. If it takes off, that day will not be too far when we all will live in a society that will provide equal opportunities to all," concludes Chowdhury.

will operate the grain-cumgeneral store as an incomegenerating enterprise. In normal years, this grainbank allows Federation members to store the produce at harvest time when crop prices can fall disastrously low and to sell later when prices return to more economic levels. One unexpected gain, according to Secretary. Jatindra Nath Barman is the Federation's pride in owning a visible symbol and asset.

Since disaster and development are inextricably linked for the poor, combining disaster preparedness with development in this way may be the most appropriate response to the complex situation faced by poor communities in vulnerable riverine localities. Through this pilot, already tested by flood, ECHO has demonstrated one constructive solution with wider potential.

legal support to poor and helpless man and women. "We developed an institutional framework for meditaganisations to 817 villages

As CDS believes in sustain able village-based development through people centred approach, it has started new

What we are trying to achieve through Shramadanarelated community actives involving people of the vil-

Preparing Communities for Disaster and Deve ECHO Disaster Prepared Work in the Rangpur-Dina by Aloysius Milon Khan types of damage on the rural poor. First, he immediate destruction of PRIP Trust is a Bangladeshi development organization which supports the strategically important initiatives and activities of the Support Organizations and Networks/Forums in Bangladesh to increase their capacity and impact.

PRIP TRUST

The goal of PRIP Trust is to build a broad-based sustainable PVDO (Private Voluntary Development Organization) sector in Bangladesh.

Support Organizations (SOS) are PVDOs whose resources, in part or in whole, are available to help other (usually smaller) PVDOs to improve their performance and impact.

Networks/Forums (N/Fs) are groupings of PVDOs around a particular theme, issue, or problem.

PRIP Trust believes that its support to SOs and N/Fs will achieve a multiplier effect as the SOs and N/Fs will, in turn, work to support the large number of private voluntary organizations which implement development programs among the poor to enable them to have greater participation in social, economic, and civic life. PRIP Trust's target for 1996-1999 is to improve the competence/capacity of 40 SOs and N/Fs who will then increase the competence of 400 PVDOs with the potential to improve the lives of 4,000,000 poor people.

Sectors PRIP Trust has identified a few sectors in which it works. The sectors have been chosen where PVDOs have a comparative advantage over government and the business sector, PVDOs have considerable growth potential, and no other agency is taking a sectorwide perspective. The sectors are: Institutional Development; Natural Resource Management; Employment and Income Generation Activities; Non-formal Education; Disaster Management.

Services In order to achieve its goal, PRIP Trust provides the following services -- technical assistance; training; flexible funding; in-house consultation; research, documentation, and dissemination of new ideas and innovations in its work with the SOs and N/Fs.

Contact Person

Aroma Goon Chief Executive Officer

PRIP Trust

House # 56, Road # 16 (New) Dhanmandi, Dhaka - 1209 Telephone: 815953, 819111, 810789 Fax: 880-2-816429

For emancipating the prisoners of poverty, Comilla Proshika Centre For Development (CPCD) remains committed to people's development movement in Bangladesh. With this end in view, it has been working for:

- Growth and Development of Grass-root People's Organizations
- Human Resource Development
- Capital Resource Development
- Environmental Development

CPCD wishes to congratulate various actors people, institutions, well-wishers, donors, sponsors and Governments for their contributions in sustainable development of Bangladesh.

Comilla Proshika Centre For Development

House # 66, Road # 8A, Dhanmondi R/A Dhaka-1209, Bangladesh

Phone: 811235, 323088-9