Privatisation of NCBs

Rupali by June this yr, Agrani, Janata by '98

By Inam Ahmed and R M Titumir

The government is planning to privatise Rupali Bank, a nationalised commercial bank (NCB) this year and two other NCBs — Agrani and Janata by 1998.

Agrani Bank will be divested in 1997 and Janata Bank in 1998, according to a government plan for the development of the financial sector.

Privatisation of the NCBs, a long standing issue under the donor-financed structural reform programme, will be made under the planned 744 million US dollar Financial Sector Development Project (FSDP).

According to a government estimate, Rupali Bank's privatisation will cost 50 million dollars while the other two NCBs restructuring will involve 160 million dollars.

Rupali is scheduled to be divested by June, 1996. "It may be delayed by a few months due to political considerations, but it will certainly be privatised by end of December," confirmed an official source.

"We have already identified one hundred branches of Rupali Bank which are incurring continuous losses during the last three years and have no prospect of making profit in the future. These will be closed down before the bank is privatised," said a senior Finance Ministry official in charge of Banking Policy. "Auditors have been appointed to appraise the net worth of the bank. This is a vital issue for selling the bank."

However, the World Bank recommended that at least 200 branches of Rupali be shut down before it is privatised.

Rupali Bank has 518 branches including one overseas. With 6368 employees and officials, it made a loss of Taka 35 lakh in 1994. Its paid-up capital is Taka 125 crore.

BNP may agree to judicial ref on proposals

By Nazmul Ashraf

BNP may consider seeking of judicial reference on the specific and written proposals, on solving the current political crisis, by both the ruling party and the Opposition, as demanded by opposition parties, a top BNP leader hinted yesterday.

The leader, however, said that the ruling party would respond to the Opposition proposal only after discussing the issue in the party forum.

Until last night, the BNP stalwarts, engaged in backstage parleys with the Opposition, did not discuss the matter among themselves.

The BNP leader, asking not to be named, said his party might agree to the Opposition proposal provided

AL street march for PM's resignation tomorrow

By Staff Correspondent

Awami League will stage street march tomorrow in the city demanding immediate resignation of the Prime Minister for holding polls under a caretaker government.

AL Chief Sheikh Hasina will lead the march which is scheduled to start at 3 pm from the Mahakhali rail crossing.

Meanwhile, the negotiation between the ruling BNP and the opposition political parties is now focused on the issues of sending out written proposals to each other and a face-to-face meeting. Opposition sources hinted.

The main points of the backstage parleys were: who would send out the written proposal first; whether the meeting be held before or after the Prime Minister's resignation; and what would be the power structure of the proposed advisory council.

In another development, workers party leaders Rashed Khan Menon and Haider Akbar Khan Rono yesterday called on AL president Sheikh Hasina and held an informal meeting at her residence.

Sources said that the hour-long meeting discussed the latest Opposition stance in the backstage parleys with

Troops encircle Chechens holding 100 hostages

PERVOMAYSKAYA (Russia), Jan 11: Russian helicopter gunships today circled menacingly over a convoy of Chechen rebels holding more than 100 hostages, and a top Russian commander said the guerrillas must be annihilated, reports AP.

Talks failed to break the deadlock between the rebels who say they will shoot their captives if they are not guaranteed safe passage and the Russians who insist they release the hostages before crossing into Chechnya.

Russian troops advanced in dozens of armoured vehicles and trucks towed up heavy artillery. The rebels were apparently reluctant to give up the hostages, fearing a Russian attack once their human shield was removed.

"These bandits must be eliminated," said Maj Gen

Alexander Mikhailov, a spokesman for the Federal Security Service.

The convoy of 11 buses and two trucks was stopped Wednesday at the village of Pervomayskaya, a cluster of a few dozen houses located near the Chechen border in Dagestani, a neighbouring republic.

The Chechens had earlier released up to 3,000 hostages seized Tuesday in the Dagestani city of Kizlyar.

'Napalm Chechens'

MOSCOW, Jan 11: Russian ultra-nationalist leader Vladimir Zhirinovskiy told President Boris Yeltsin on Wednesday to napalm Chechen rebels or face defeat in June's presidential election, reports Reuters.

Speaking before a congress of his Liberal Democratic Party overwhelmingly nominated him as its candidate for the June 16 poll, Zhirinovskiy said he would deal with the rebels if Yeltsin did not.

Urging Yeltsin to end the war in the rebel north Caucasus region, Zhirinovskiy told where the rebels holed up in a hospital and demanded the withdrawal of Russian troops from their homeland.

Many of the hostages the rebels took with them were women and children, who waved white flags outside the windows of the buses and begged the Russians not to shoot.

The rebels took food and drink with them when they left the hospital. Conditions were miserable, however, with a strong wind blowing across the snowy steppe and the temperature at minus 5 Celsius.

Dagestani authorities also provided food for the hostages, but the Russians turned back officials of the International Red Cross seeking to deliver medicine, food and blankets to the captives.

"We heard the hostages are in bad shape and need medicine," said Pierre Zuffray of the International Red Cross.

Officials in Dagestani said at least 40 people — some 17 rebels, 9 police officers and 14 civilians — were killed in the raid on Kizlyar, and about 50 others were wounded.

Hashimoto elected Japanese PM

TOKYO, Jan 11: Ryutaro Hashimoto was elected as Japan's 82nd Prime Minister today by a parliamentary majority from the ruling tripartite coalition in the lower house of representatives, reports AFP.

Hashimoto, 58, leader of the Liberal Democratic Party (LDP), the senior coalition member, was elected on 288 votes in the 511-seat house after the formal resignation of incumbent Tomichi Murayama, head of the Social Democratic Party (SDP).

He also gained a majority in the upper house of councillors.

The LDP, SDP and junior member new party Sakigake have ruled in coalition since June 1994.

The coalition agreed at the weekend to continue under Hashimoto.

It was the first time the LDP has been in the Prime Minister's office since being toppled at the polls in mid-1993 after a string of scandals that ended 38 years of single party rule.

Hashimoto is Japan's 53rd Prime Minister since the end of World War II.

'Manufacturing sector speeding up GDP growth'

By Staff Correspondent

The rapidly growing manufacturing sector is accelerating the country's economic growth rate, US Ambassador in Bangladesh David N Merrill observed yesterday.

"The manufacturing sector is growing rapidly and the GDP growth has been increasing with the expansion of markets for Bangladeshi products, as the entrepreneurs here are responding to opportunities to compete in the international arena," he said, while inaugurating the 3-day US Trade Show '96 at the Sheraton Hotel.

The American envoy praised Bangladesh's achievements in the economic field, but said much remains to be done to utilise the full potential for growth.

The recent economic reforms have helped build up a strong private sector in Bangladesh, which is playing a vital role in strengthening the economy, he added. "This progress has brought increased international stature for Bangladesh."
