HAT the way to beat any transport strike on the 10 km traffic jam at Aricha is to roller skate.

These days you do see a few skaters on "harta" days moving about town. It should not be too difficult for them to roller skate to Chittagong or Rangpur; the roads there are simply super.

If you think the distance is any problem, here's some facts: Theodore James Coombs of California skated 5193 miles from Los Angeles to New York and back to Yates Centre, Kansas from May 30 to September 14, 1979.

To beat Coombs' record you'd have to go to Chittagong about twenty times and back. That's not a problem, but the thing is the transport strike will be over by then.

Taylor for a clean sweep

SYDNEY, Jan 19: Australia will aim to brush aside worries about their frail top-order batting and sweep the final series 2-0 when they face Sri Lanka in the second final of the World Series Limited-overs cricket tournament at the Sydney Cricket Ground on Saturday, reports AP.

The Australians won the first game in the best-of-three series by 18 runs in Melbourne on Thursday night and can seal the title in front of a sellout crowd in Sydney.

Australian captain Mark Taylor said Friday that he is not concerned by a succession of failures by the home team's top-order.

Australia won the first final by coming back from 39-4 to make 201-7, and then by sending Sri Lanka spinning from 107-2 to 183 all out.

Apart from an awesome opening partnership of 189 between Taylor and Mark Waugh in Perth last Friday, Australia have crumbled to be 3-46, 6-38, 3-27, 4-54, 3-54, and 4-39 in the World Series this season.

Taylor dismisses the poor starts as a quirk of one-day cricket.

"I think we've batted quite well in this series," Taylor said. "These blokes [Sri Lanka] are bowling very well early on and 3-30, 3-50 can happen.

The good news is we're still making 200 plus in every game and the end result is what you work on. Two or three of us have chipped in fast bowler Craig McDermott was unscathed by a blow from allrounder Shane Lee.

McDermott was hit on a knuckle on his left hand while batting in the nets, but returned to bowl.

Sri Lankan team manager Duleep Mendis said his team's morale was good despite the loss in the first final.

"We were in control for the first three-quarters of the match," Mendis said.

He said either test opener Chandika Hathurusinghe or off spinner Ruwan Kalpage will replace middle-order batsman Roshan Mahanama, who tore a hamstring on Thursday.

TEAMS

AUSTRALIA: Mark Taylor (captain), Mark Waugh, Ricky Ponting, Steve Waugh, Stuart Law, Michael Bevan, Ian Healy, Paul Reiffel, Shane Warne, Craig McDermott, Glenn McGrath, Shane Lee (likely 12th man).

SRI LANKA: Sanath Jayasuriya, Ramesh Kaluwitharana, Asanka Gurusinha, Aravinda de Silva, Arjuna Ranatunga, Hashan Tilakaratne, Ruwan Kalpage, Chandika Hathurusinghe, Chaminda Vaas, Kumar Dharmasena, Ravindra Pushpakumara, Pramodya Wickremasinghe (12th man to be named).

"I get a feeling that everyone has underestimated the Sri Lankan apart from us — they're a good one-day cricket side."

Wicketkeeper Ian Healy passed a fitness test on the groin muscle he strained while batting on Friday, while plaine during the tour of South Africa.

Turner's first move was to drop captain Ken Rutherford and pass the leadership to Canterbury wicketkeeper Lee Germon.

Germon at that stage had played only a single one-day international and no Tests for New Zealand but his quiet, authoritative leadership has instilled a much-needed discipline and self-belief in the side.

They must make their World Cup challenge without the benefit of Martin Crowe's superlative batsmanship after a recurring knee injury forced him to announce his retirement from international cricket on Tuesday.

In his absence, all-rounder Chris Cairns and elegant left-hander Stephen Fleming are expected to share much of the batting burden.

After struggling with injuries for several seasons, Cairns has blossomed into a true international-class player. He will be hoping to reproduce an 88-ball century against India in November and pick up valuable wickets with his fast-medium bowling.

Fleming has long been touted as a top world player of the future. A classical and graceful stroke-maker, the Cup could be the catalyst for an outstanding career.

Paceman Danny Morrison and English-born all-rounder Roger Tose are also key men for New Zealand.

Lee said cricket is a bit of a confidence thing. Once you're winning, it's very hard to stop the roll... you change from negative to positive very quickly.

Kiwis wait in the wings

WELLINGTON, Jan 19: If success is the best revenge, New Zealand have the perfect motivation for winning cricket's 1996 World Cup Reports Reuter.

After several seasons of woeful performances and controversies, New Zealand's Test standing has hit rock bottom and they have lost the respect of the cricketing world.

But there have been signs this season that New Zealand are no longer pushovers, and with recent humiliations still fresh in their minds, they may be ready to surprise a few opponents.

"It's great opportunity to get the team together and say 'Hey, the rest of the world don't rate us, people in New Zealand are laughing at us, let's prove the bastard wrong,'" said former Test wicketkeeper Warren Lees, who coached New Zealand at the 1992 tournament.

New Zealand have had arguably the best Cup warm-up programme of any competing side, but have been unable to string together a consistent series of good performances.

In November, they lost a close one-day series in India 3-2 but gained some valuable experience of the pitches they are likely to encounter at the tournament.

Then a series against World Cup holders Pakistan in New Zealand was shared 2-2. The New Zealanders play three limited overs matches, against Zimbabwe later this month.

There's stacks of potential, lots of individuals with ability, but getting together as a group is still a problem for them," Lees told Reuters.

"If it all come together on the day, they could win. To get in the semifinals would have to be their goal, our guys will have to play out of their skins to make the semifinals, but I think that's realistic."

New Zealand play the tournament's opening match on February 14, against perennial contenders England at Ahmedabad, then face the Netherlands, South Africa, the United Arab Emirates and Pakistan in their other group games.

Barring a major upset, they should progress with the three other Test-playing teams to the quarter finals, at which point the competition becomes sudden death.

New Zealand do not feature prominently in World Cup history. Their best effort was under Lees at home in 1992 — losing just one game in the round-robin stage, only to be beaten by eventual winners Pakistan in the semifinals.

Current coach Glenn Turner, the accomplished former New Zealand and Worcestershire opener, was appointed after the team suffered a disastrous spell in 1994-95 when Test series were lost to England, South Africa, West Indies and Sri Lanka.

That losing streak saw New Zealand ranked equal last among Test-playing teams with Zimbabwe. Their reputation suffered a further blow off the field with revelations of Marijuana-smoking and other breaches of discipline during the tour of South Africa.

Turner's first move was to drop captain Ken Rutherford and pass the leadership to Canterbury wicketkeeper Lee Germon.

Germon at that stage had played only a single one-day international and no Tests for New Zealand but his quiet, authoritative leadership has instilled a much-needed discipline and self-belief in the side.

Chang ready for challenge

MELBOURNE, Jan 19: American Michael Chang has been burdened with the tag of "one-hit wonder" for several years, reports Reuter.

Since capturing the French Open title as a 17-year-old in 1989, Chang has found further Grand Slam titles to be frustratingly elusive despite cementing himself in the world's top five.

After heroically braving severe cramps to overhaul then world number one Ivan Lendl on his way to becoming the youngest-ever French Open winner, experts predicted further Grand Slam success. It was not to be.

But there is mounting evidence the world number five is now poised to shed his unwanted label as the sport's "nearly" man on Sunday next week by taking the Australian Open at Flinders Park.

Chang has strolled through the opening week of the tournament without conceding a set to reach the fourth round.

Branding a new, longer racquet and relying on his

renowned competitiveness

and mobility Chang is convinced he has the game to upset compatriots and tournament favourites Andre Agassi and Pete Sampras.

While accepting they are the world's best two players, the US Davis Cup player does not believe the gap is unbridgeable.

"I think I'm gaining on them," Chang said today after his third clear victory at this tournament, beating Frenchman Guillaume Raoux 6-2, 6-2, 7-6 on Centre Court.

"I think my game is continuing to improve and I think that Sampras and Agassi have reached the peak of their tennis careers, but I feel my best years of tennis are still ahead of me."

Earlier on the eve of the Australian Open, Chang said: "In the big events they have been very tough to beat, but that does not mean they are unbeatable."

"I like to think I am a better player than last year," he added, referring to his performance here in losing to Sampras, the eventual runner up, at the semifinal stage in 1995.

It was as close as Chang, who turns 24 next month, came to adding to his Grand Slam tally before his final defeat against Austrian Clay Court specialist Thomas Muster at Roland Garros last June.

Lacking the power of his taller rivals, particularly in his serve, Chang has looked to technology for salvation.

"The racquet has made quite a bit of difference, particularly in my serve... It's given me extra reach on my serves," said Chang, explaining how American tennis equipment manufacturer Prince invested 16 months of research to add an inch to the length of the racquet to 28 inches.

"You cannot just add an extra inch to the handle, we needed to shift the weight around quite a bit, so we put a lot of hard work into its development and it has definitely paid off."

Chang admits he needs to improve several aspects of his game merely to survive in a game increasingly dominated by bigger, stronger players.

PILCOM goes for ex-cricketers

CALCUTTA, Jan 19: The organizers of the 12-nation Cricket World Cup released the names of match referees Friday, which reads like a Who's Who of cricket starts, reports AP.

Among them are Clive Lloyd of the West Indies, Mansoor Ali Khan Pataudi of India, Raman Subba Row of England, John Reid of New Zealand and Ranjan Madugala of Sri Lanka.

The organizers also released the names of umpires.

They are: Stephen Randall (Australia), Steve Dunne (New Zealand), David Shepherd (England), Cyril Mitchell (South Africa) Steve Bucknor (West Indies), Ian Robinson (Zimbabwe), A Venkataraghavan and K K Ramaswamy (India), Khizar Hyat and Mehboob Shah (Pakistan) and K T Francis and B C Carey (Sri Lanka).

The third umpires are: Stephen Tovey (Holland), G Farid Malik (United Arab Emirates), Anil Sarkar (Kenya), S K Bansal, K Parthasarathy, RC Sharma (India), Ikram Rabbani, Mian Aslam, Shakeel Khan (Pakistan) and TM Samarasinghe (Sri Lanka).

Women's top seed Monica Seles ran into her first patch of difficulty after dropping her serve in the first game with a double fault. She ended by reeling off eight straight games, losing just 12 points in that stretch, in a 7-5, 6-0 victory over French player Julie Halard-Decugis.

Agassi wasted no time reasserting his dominance after losing the first set of his third-round match to qualifier Steve Bryan, a fellow American ranked 225th. He won 4-6, 6-0, 6-2, 6-1.

Muster, seeded third and in contention for the top spot in the rankings, twisted his right ankle while backpedaling for a deep shot midway through the second set. He had it taped, saved three set points in a marathon second set, and beat Swedish qualifier Nicklas Kulti 6-4, 7-6 (11-9), 6-4.

Chang, the only one of the top five seeds to win all his matches in straight sets so far, defeated hard-hitting Frenchman Guillaume Raoux 6-2, 6-2, 7-6 (8-6). Raoux made the final set tight by coming up with sizzling sharp angles and deft drops.

After four days of temperatures in the 70s F (20s Celsius), the heat was approaching the 90s (in the 30s Celsius) Friday.

No. 11 Richard Krajicek of the Netherlands withdrew with a lower back injury with his score against French qualifier Jean-Philippe Fleurian tied at one set each and 2-2. Fleurian earlier had survived a five-set match against Swedish player Stefan Edberg, a former No. 1 who is retiring at the end of this year.

Seles, a three-time Australian Open champion, said her play in the second set was her best since arriving Down Under this time, even though she won a warmup tournament last week.

In the second set's fifth game, Halard-Decugis appeared to have beaten her with a lob-drop shot combination, but Seles dashed in and flicked back a winner.

"At first, I didn't want to run for it. That was probably one of my best gets ever. I didn't hurt my injury at all," Seles said, referring to a groin pull suffered in last week's tournament.

She said she still is receiving treatment for the injury.

Double blow for Belgium

BARCELONA, Spain, Jan 19: Belgium centre forward Alexandre de Chaffoy broke his leg in the opening match of the men's Olympic hockey qualifying tournament of Friday, reports Reuter.

Belgium's misery was compounded by losing the round-robin game 2-1 to Malaysia.

Seeds struggle forward

MELBOURNE, Jan 19: Andre Agassi had to come from behind against a qualifier for the second time, Thomas Muster had to overcome a twisted ankle.

For Michael Chang, it was business as usual, reports AP.

The fifth-seeded Chang advanced quietly and steadily into the round of 16 at the Australian Open as temperatures climbed Friday. He said he feels he is gaining on the two top seeds - Pete Sampras and Agassi.
