Dutch govt gives lifeline to Fokker

THE HAUGE, Jan 27: The Dutch government released 152.7 million dollars to keep the Fokker aircraft group alive yesterday while urgent efforts are made to find a rescuer or buyers for parts of the business, reports AFP.

The government had decided to provide an emergency lifeline of 255 million guilders (152.7 million dollars) to Fokker and to bring forward the purchase of four aircraft by the defence ministry. Economy Minister Hans Wijers said.

This second measure would provide 110 million guilders in cash to three units put under protection from creditors and would ensure that they survived for five to six weeks, he said.

Part of the Fokker group was put under court protection from creditors on Tuesday after the parent company, Daimler-Benz of Germany, had ceased providing financial support.

Last week Daimler-Benz offered to inject one billion guilders if the Dutch state provided aid totalling 2.3 billion guilders, but the Dutch government rejected this.

Toyota will cut exports to US market

TOKYO, Jan 27: Toyota Motor Corp expects to cut exports from Japan to the US so sharply that only eight per cent of Toyotas in US showrooms four years from now would be made in Japan, a plan that illustrates a sea change overtaking Japanese auto production, says Wall Street Journal Service.

Hiroshi Okuda, Toyota's president, said in an interview that Toyota plans to cut annual exports from Japan to the US to about 100,000 vehicles by the year 2000. That's less than a quarter of the 433,000 vehicles Toyota exported to the US last year.

Toyota expects to sell 1.2 million vehicles in the US in the year 2000, Okuda said, compared with 1.1 million last year. During the same period, Toyota plans to increase North American production to 1.2 million vehicles a year from 734,000 last year, he said — 100,000 more than Toyota has previously indicated.

Consumer prices drop in Japan

TOKYO, Jan 27: Under assault from a sluggish economy and a strong yen, Japanese consumer prices fell in 1995 for the first time since the government began calculating the index 25 years ago, reports AP.

Prices last year dropped 0.1 per cent nationwide, the Prime Minister's Office announced Friday, although it was not much of a drop from 1994's small inflation rate of 0.7 per cent.

Shipping was slightly rosier for consumers in the Tokyo area, where consumer prices fell by 0.4 per cent. Going out to dinner in the capital is also cheaper than it was — prices fell by 1.7 per cent. The trend was led by fast food restaurants, which slashed prices of hamburgers. Japan is in the fifth year of recession, and bargain-hunting consumers have forced businesses to keep a lid on prices or lose customers. Meanwhile, last year's strong yen — which dropped below 80 yen to the dollar at one point — made imports cheaper.

The better buys might be good news for shoppers, but deflation in general is a sign of a weak economy.

The drop in prices could also be bad news to those on public pensions, which are tied to consumer prices. If the consumer price index drops, public pensions are supposed to be reduced as well.
