

Dhaka Day by Day

Perfect Salesperson!

by Sabrina Shahab

Sales executives, marketing executives. You have all heard of them. Some of them travel in trendy cars, sit in spacious offices. Others not so lucky, travels by rickshaws and grumble about their ill luck. But all of them have one thing in common. It is called the gift of gaffe, the classic story of teller syndrome.

Anyone travelling by BRTC buses has been definitely subjected to this gift, meaning has met one of those travelling salespersons who try to sell more appropriately push different types of goods down your throat. It is a unique experience as exhilarating as a talk show where it is worth watching their eloquence, their understanding of human nature.

For example it is hot summer. You are dripping wet. Never mind, your ever obliging, resourceful salesman has already got a handful of ice cream right under your nose yelling "ice cream, ice cream, one taka please".

As a knowledgeable Dhakaite you are fully aware that these ice-creams are made of dirty water. But still, for a moment don't you feel like having one? Well what a shrewd sales tactics, turning opportunities into sales! These people have got something for everyone, every occasion, you just name it. Chocolates for children, face powder, creams for women, tooth powder, breath fresheners for tobacco chewing.

and smoking men, cucumber pieces for rozadars just before iftar.

Think, how many times have you heard this sales pitch? Typical sales pitch of a salesperson who says with complete conviction. Here look at this gold chain in my hand. I shall give this to you for only Tk 10. If you go to a big shopping centre, you will get the same thing for Tk 15. This chain is as good as any made in Hong Kong or Singapore. Buy now, stock is limited! Ah! they are already onto a typical Dhakaite's love of bargain and his/her on-going affair with Bideshi products.

Not only that they are perfectly aware of our herd mentality. If anyone buys then look out, you are expected to buy too. They hold the offending product under your nose and fix you with a deadly stare which says "buy". Truly it takes lots of guts to say no, worse it makes you feel guilty!

Universities and business institutions are spending million of bucks trying to produce perfect salespeople. What about carrying out researches on our friendly sales people analyzing their motivation, their life styles, their behaviour patterns? And what about taking one of them to these high-brow institutions for demonstration and training purposes? These may yield results which might take us close to finding the perfect salesperson.
