Sperm to be treated under food and drugs act!

OTTAWA: The federal government will ban the use of fresh sperm in donor insemination and introduce strict measures to screen sperm donors, reports AP.

Under regulations announced Thursday, semen used in assisted insemination will be treated for legal purposes as if it were a drug and regulated under the Food and Drugs Act. The new regulations are intended to eliminate the risk of transmitting AIDS or other diseases through a procedure used by thousands of Canadian women annually. Semen will have to be frozen and quarantined for six months before it can be implanted in a woman. Donors must be tested when the semen is given and again six months later to ensure there was no hidden infection at the time of the first test. Doctors who violate the regulations will be liable to large fines or prison terms "This is one step in the government's endeavour to protect those Canadians most affected by new reproductive and genetic technologies," said Health Minister David Dingwall.

Experts have said for years that fresh sperm should not be used in donor insemination, yet it is believed that some doctors do so.

"It is my understanding that this practice is still going on in Canada," said John Jarrell, a Calgary doctor and specialist in infertility treatment.

Int'l mediators reject contact with Karadzic official

SARAJEVO, May 31: International mediators stepped up pressure on Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic on Thursday, saying they would not work with the hardline nationalist he recently named to assume some of his duties. reports AP.

Carl Bildt, the civilian administrator for implementing the Dayton peace agreement. said in a statement his office would refuse any contacts with Biljana Plavsic, chosen vice president by Karadzic on May

By handing over some duties to Playsic, Karadzic hoped to allow Bildt to resume contacts with the Bosnian Serb leadership. But Bildt's statement characterized the move as a bid by Karadzic to "hang on to public office in clear violation of the peace agreement." Meanwhile, Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic faces

Netanyahu, who has a slim but tough-to-overcome lead with all but the absentee ballot counted, drew his strength from anger and frustration over suicide bombings by Muslim extremists that killed 59

His answer was to promise a policy that would put personal security ahead of visionary peacemaking and handshakes on the White House lawn. He vowed to get tough with Palestinian leader Yasser

Specifically, he pledged to close the PLO headquarters in Jerusalem, end the building freeze on new Jewish settlements in the West Bank and authorise Israeli troops to pursue terrorists into PLO-run autonomy zones if necessary.

No less worrisome for the Palestinians are his campaign pledges not to honour commitments to withdraw from the West Bank city of Hebron or negotiate Palestinian demands for a state with Jerusalem as its capital. He also said he would not cede the Golan Heights to Syria for a peace agreement. Such stances brought expressions of alarm from senior Palestinian officials and the Syrian government. Even President Clinton was seen as leaning towards Prime Minister Shimon Peres because of concern for the continuation of the peace process.
