DCCI chief hails Chief Adviser, EC

Ali Hossain, the President of the Dhaka Chamber of Commerce and Industry (DCCI) in a press statement yesterday expressed his deepest gratitude for the untiring endeavour of the Chief Adviser and other members of the caretaker government and the Chief Election Commissioner for holding a free, fair and disciplined election, reports BSS.

Terming it a unique in the history of Bangladesh which has paved the way for an uninterrupted democratic process, he said the election 1996 has opened a new horizon for national uplift through congenial democratic practices.

The DCCI chief congratulated all who have won the race and expressed his cordial thanks to all who participated in the historic concert.

All elected members, he added, would surely uphold the democratic spirit and shall work at consensus attaching highest priority on economic and other national issues.

Observers say Polling was completely fair

The June 12 parliamentary polls were completely 'free and fair' and the participation of the voters in such large numbers indicated that the election had generated enthusiasm and interest among the people of Bangladesh, reports BSS.

This was unequivocally expressed by various groups of foreign observers now in Bangladesh for watching and monitoring the Jatiya Sangsad polls under the neutral caretaker government which the nation achieved at the cost of long struggle and movement.

This is for the first time that such larger numbers of observers including the Commonwealth team, European Union team, South Asian non-governmental team, National Democratic Institute of the USA, Japanese election observer team of parliamentarians, Iranian, British and Sri

Observers say

Lankan teams and other organisations and individuals have come to Bangladesh for observing the much desired national election of Bangladesh.

The elections were normal and no complaint regarding poll irregularities have been received from anywhere," the observers opined.

The observers were also impressed over participation of all political parties as well as the security arrangements taken by the authorities to ensure free and fair holding of the polls. "We have observed that the people have got the opportunities to cast their votes without any fear," they said and added that following participation of such larger number of voters in some places exceeding over 80 per cent, the future government would be an acceptable one and would get the opportunity to govern the country from a convenient position.

Co-leader of MDI (National Democratic Institution) and former US Congressman Stephen Solaz termed the election a great franchise. He said on June 12 in Bangladesh the idea of democracy has come true. The vote is not only a triumph to democracy but also tribute to the people of Bangladesh, he added.

I urged those who have won the election to treat them with magnanimity and who have lost to accept the defeat with graciousness and act as members of loyal opposition," Solaz said.

British MP Peter Shore, while giving his reactions on the election is that I thought it of the high rate, I thought it was even better than that of the 1991 election, which I attended five years ago. I was delighted to see such a high turn-out of voters and particularly so many women going to the polls," he said.

I believe the election was conducted fairly and honestly and I think the results accurately reflected the wishes of the Bengali people," Shore said.

The Commonwealth team leader Tan Sri Dr Mohd Ghazali Shafie said, "We are 12 in number and we arrived here on June 4 and did a pre-election study of laws and regulations and the guidelines. The members visited six divisions of Bangladesh and today they have come back and last night they have sent me their reports."

"We all agreed that the elections have been held in accordance with laws and regulations. "What impressed us more," Shafie said "was the tremendous turn out of the ladies - the women with their beautiful sarrees". "We know that there were some serious disturbances. By and large the elections were fair."

Leader of the delegation of European Union observer team, a senator of Italian parliament and leader of the European women's team Cayetana de Zulueta said, "Our conclusion after visiting voting centres across the country that it was a free and fair election. We are impressed by the voters' presence."

Leader of the four-member Pakistan observer team Senator Masood Kausar said, "We divided our team into two groups and we visited different areas. We found that atmosphere was tension-free. There was a friendly atmosphere. The arrangements were adequate and a large number of people attended the polling booths."

Andrew Peacock, former foreign minister of Australia and member of MDI said, "We 41 people have been watching here during the last week. We believe that the election would be free and fair. But as an observer group we had to monitor very carefully and we reached a conclusion after extensive discussion and I think the people and the government of Bangladesh can be clear what is franchise."

Leader of the Japanese team Shin Sakurai MP termed the election as "peaceful." "We are very much impressed by the interest shown by the people of Bangladesh particularly by the women who turned up in large number to vote."

85 scouts helped EC announce polls results

Members of the Scouts played a significant role at the Election Commission (EC) office over the last two days to help announce the polls results.

A total of 85 Rover Scouts, including air, sea scouts and the girl guides all helped carry out the room-to-room despatch of result sheets and other papers. Each scout was assigned to deliver one of the eight copies of the election result to either the radio, TV, media or EC officials.

The scouts were advised not to give vent to their personal feelings or talk to any body, said Dr Nizam, an elderly scout.

Japanese polls monitoring team meets Biswas

A nine-member delegation of the election observer team of parliamentarians of Japan called on President Abdur Rahman Biswas at Bangabhaban yesterday, reports UNB.

Shin Sakurai, member of the House of Representatives of Japan, led the delegation.

Welcoming the delegation members, the President said Japan's help and cooperation at the time of our national calamities were laudable. Japan is a close friend of Bangladesh and helped us in need, he added.

President Biswas said Japan may help and cooperate in training and developing our human resources and generation of electricity.

He appreciated Japan's technological development and said, "We, as friend of Japan, are proud of its development". The President stressed much on technological assistance to Bangladesh to widen its development programme.

He expressed the hope that Japan would come in a bigger way and help the development programmes of Bangladesh.
