telecom project TOKYO, July 10: Japan's Mitsubishi Corp. and Nippon Telegraph and Telephone Copr. (NTT) said yesterday they would acquire a stake in a Singapore-based satellite communications project for mobile telephone services, reports AFP.

The major trading company and NTT Mobile Communications Network Inc. (NTT Docomo) will jointly invest 1.2 billion yen (10.9 million dollars) to acquire a state amounting to "several" per cent in Asia Pacific Mobile Telecommunications satellite. Pte. (APMT), the companies said in a statement.

The investment will be made through an equally owned investment company to be set up by the two companies later this month or in August, they said.

APMT will be also controlled 51 per cent by four Chinese government-run com-panies, 25 per cent by two Singaporean government-affiliated firms and 10 per cent by Thai concerns.

The venture plans to launch two communications satellites to start mobile telephone service across Asia in mid-1998.

Jakarta to probe dumping in steel, polyester sector

JAKARTA, July 10: Indonesian authorities have set up a team to study allegations of dumping practices here in the steel and polyester sector by foreign producers, report said here today, according to AFP.

"The operational team will handle and settle these problems rapidly," said Tunky Ariwibbwo, the minister for Industry and: Trade, as quoted by the Bisnis Indonesia daily.

He said that the Indonesian anti-dumping committee formed by the government in June has set up a special team to probe allegations of dumping practices here in the steel and polyester sectors.

The minister did not give any detail on the membership of the committee or the special team.

The dumping allegations were made by the state-steel producer Pt Krakatau Steel and the Indonesian Textile Producers' Association.

Krakatau steel said that steel products from Russia China and India were believed to be sold at dumping prices

The textile association said that polyester filaments from South Korea and Taiwan were entering the Indonesian mar ket at below-production costs.

In June, Jakarta issued a deregulation package for the economy which included antidumping import duties and duties on imports of subsidised

It also set up an antidumping committee to assist Indonesian businesses accused abroad of dumping practices and probe dumping allegations

Toyota recalling 270,000 defective vehicles in Asia

TOKYO, July 10: Japan's largest car marker. Toyota Motor Corp. has started recalling nearly 270,000 passenger cars and vans in Japan and other Asian countries due to defective automatic gear shift levers, the transport ministry said yesterday, reports AFP.

The ministry said Toyota would recall 257,336 units in Japan while it would recall 12.000 units sold in Hong Kong, Singapore, Brunei, Macao, Malaysia, Indonesia and Thailand

The planned recall will cover seven models, including the Corolla and Sprinter mod els, produced in Japan between April 1995 and May according to recal orders received by the min The ministry said the defect was in connection rods encased in the gear shift lever. which breaks easily and moves erratically.

A Toyota spokesman said: We plan to send a recall notice to our clients in these Asian countries and regions where a recall system is not established.

China to build 200 ports in 5 years

SHANGHAI, July 10: China will build more than 200 ports throughout the country in the next five years, including an international shipping centre in Shanghai, news reports said today, according to AFP.

The Wenhui Bao Daily and the Liberation Daily quoted Li Juchang. Vice Minister for Transportation as saying that priority would be given to the construction of ports to handle foreign trade and ship raw ma-

Li said that the each of the 200 ports would have the capacity to move 1,000 tonnes of cargo in order to increase the total volume of freight handled to more than 300 million

The Shanghai international shipping centre would have two wings in the eastern provinces of Jiangsu and Zhejiang and is needed to turn Shanghai into an international economic, financial and trade centre, he said

Iraq still violating sanctions with Iran's help, US alleges

UNITED NATIONS, July 10: Iraq, helped by its former enemy Iran, is still smuggling oil and other goods in violation of UN sanctions imposed six years ago, the United States told a Security Council committee, reports AP.

Western officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity Tuesday, said the allegation was contained in a letter submitted by the United States to the UN Sanctions Committee on Iraq, a council body which monitors the sanctions imposed after Baghdad invaded Kuwait in 1990.

There was no comment from the US Mission. But wellinformed officials said the Americans told the committee that they were making the allegation on behalf of the multinational naval force which enforces the embargo against

The officials said Iranian

President Clinton made similar allegations during a report to Congress which was released May 5. In the report, Clinton said vessels carrying dlrs 1.1 million in petroleum products and dirs 1.4 million in dates from Iraq has been intercepted by the multinational force during the previous two

A Western official said the American letter alleged that violations by both Iraq and Iran had been continuing since the May report.

Big insurance cos anxious about global warming

GENEVA. July 10: Major insurance companies from six continents, fearing huge claims from future natural disasters. Tuesday demanded early reductions in "greenhouse gases" blamed for global warming, reports AP.

The industry, reeling from a series of "billion dollar" storms over the past decade, appealed to governments, businesses and individuals to work toto counter climate gether change

Property insurers are the industry most likely to be directly affected by climate change" since its has to pay for damage from more frequent and severe storms believed to result from warmer weather. said a joint statement.

The insurers, taking part in a conference of 150 nations on climate change, called for early, substantial reductions in greenhouse gas emissions." such as carbon dioxide.

Included in the "insurance initiative position paper" organized by the United Nations Environment Programme were 58 companies from Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America, Australia and New Zealand and Conspicuously absent, with no explanation, were US firms Other business groups at the conference have been urging a slower approach to placing restrictions on industry in hopes of reducing greenhouse gases.

The insurance statement acknowledged that much is unknown about climate change and its effect in producing sforms, but said there are indications warmer weather produced by solar heat trapped by the gases — can produce extreme weather

"It is clear, though, that even small shifts of regional climate zones and/or storm patterns carry the potential of increased property damage," it

Ivo Knoepfel, a climate and environment expert with Swiss Reinsurance Company. the world's second largest reinsurer that backs other companies, said too little is known to say for certain that climate change already has caused increased insurance

But Knoepfel said the cost of natural disasters to insurance companies has risen dramatically in the past decade as average global temperatures have been rising.

Since 1987 payouts have been averaging 10-20 billion dellars, peaking with 28 billion dollars in 1992, when Hurricane Andrew devastated southern Florida, compared with less than three billion dollars a year until the mid-

"We have very high risk potentials from storms hitting the southern US," said Knoepfel. "We also have a large risk potential with major storms over Europe, which is in the range of 10-40 billion dollars, and also a storm riskover Japan

Adding to the problem is that more and more high-risk areas are being developed. such as coastal areas and lowlying islands, he said.

Insurance companies pay for only a small part of the total loss from a storm, Knoepfel said. The bulk is a burden on the whole economy

"Often in developing countries you have no insurance cover at all." he said.

High oil prices boost Gulf economies

ABU DHABI, July 10: Oilrich Gulf Arab states are boosting their financial reserves and their economy performed well in the first half of 1996 after a surge in oil prices, experts said yesterday, reports AFP.

The six Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) states, which control around 45 per cent of the world's proven crude reserves, earned at least 5.7 billion dollars in additional revenue in the first half of 1996.

The calculation was based on an average price of OPEC's seven crudes of 18.85 dollars in the first six months of 1996 compared with the 15-16 dollar price projected by the GCC governments in their budgets.

There could be a surplus in the GCC budgets in the first half provided they stuck to their projected expenditure." said Henry Azzam, chief economist at the national commercial bank, the biggest bank in Saudi Arabia. But the improvement in oil prices is helping the GCC countries to replenish their foreign reserves and meet their commitments to foreign suppliers, whether military of civilian," he told AFP by tele-

Azzam's figures showed that Saudi Arabia, the world's top oil producer and exporter, in creased its foreign reserves to around 11 billion dollars by the end of April from 8.6 billion dollars by the end of December. Kuwait's reserves also grew to nearly 3.7 billion Azzam said he did not have figures for May and June, but expected the reserves to be higher as oil prices remained strong.

dollars from 3.5 billion dollars

Regarding the budgets, the price rise could have a very positive impact but we do not know how much they are actually spending," he said.

GCC states-Saudi Arabia. Bahrain, Qatar, Oman, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates (UAE) — produce around 13.5 million barrels per day-(BPD) of oil. Nearly 11.2 million BPD are exported, according to official figures.

Oil provides more than 80 per cent of the income of GCC nations and this has made their economies and budgets highly vulnerable to price fluctuations.

US to give Lanka $1m medical equipment

COLOMBO, July 10: The United States will provide medical equipment worth one million dollars for rehabilitation efforts in war-ravaged northern Sri Lanka, reports

An agreement for the supply of the equipment was signed by Peter Burleigh, the US ambassador, and BC Perera. Sri Lanka's finance ministry secretary, in Colombo on Tuesday. Six portable surgical wards.

surgical and sterilization equipment, anesthesia apparatus, an operating table, three 30-kilo watt generators and a seven and a half ton crane will be supplied under a US humanitarian assistance pro gramme The agreement is in response to President Chandrika Kumaratunga's appeal for 274 million dollars in international aid for the region. The 13 year-old civil war has killed more than 42,000 people. The government has prepared a three-year reconstruction plan to build bospitals. roads, telecommunications facilities, ports, houses, schools and power stations in Jaffna peninsula.

The military captured the guerrilla stronghold of Jaffna city in December and ex tended its control over the rest of the peninsula in May.

More than 400,000 Tamils who fled to avoid fighting in the last year have returned to the peninsula where the government plans to set up a civil administration

Tamil rebels are fighting for a homeland in the north and east for minority Tamils to redress what they see as discrimination by the majority Sinhalese, who control the government and the military.

Rice cultivation biggest cause of global warming in Thailand'

BANGKOK. July 10: Methane gas produced in rice farming is the biggest contributor in Thailand to global warming, a environmental researcher said, reports, AP.

Global warming, the incremental heating up of the earth's climate, is caused mostly by the accumulation of gases in the atmosphere, including methane, carbon dioxide, nitrous oxide and Kansri Boonpragob of the Thailand Environment Institute said that rice cultivation accounts for 32 per cent of the local "greenhouse" gas emissions. The Nation newspaper reported Wednesday.

Speaking at the group's annual conference on Tuesday, Kansri said the use of wood resources accounts for 27 per cent of the greenhouse gases. the transportation sector 11 per cent, forest clearing 10 per cent and power production nine per cent.

Industrial processes, livestock and emissions from oil and gas production account for the remainder, he said.
