They are classy bowlers when it comes to getting into a batting line-up. They can swing the ball late and that makes it very difficult to defend against.

Army, Ansars clinch nat'l v'ball crowns

Sports Reporter
In a gritty display of dominance yesterday, Bangladesh Army and Bangladesh Ansars clinched the men's and women's volleyball titles.

On the final day of the six-day BGIC national volleyball tourney at the Mirpur National Indoor Stadium, last year's runners-up Army took a sweet revenge by defeating champions Bangladesh Navy with a 12-15, 7-15, 5-15. It was the ninth title for Army.

Meanwhile, the Ansars girls trounced holders BJMC 15-7, 15-12, 15-7 to wrest the second title. Ansars won their first trophy in 1994.

Besides, Bangladesh Rifles and Narayanganj became third in the men's and women's group respectively after winning their play-offs against Bangladesh Air Force and Pabna.

Foreign Minister Abdus Samad Azad witnessed the finals and distributed prizes among the winners.

Women's h'ball

ATLANTA, July 31: For Denmark and Hungary, the question wasn't whether they would qualify for the semifinals, but where.

Camilla Andersen helped answer the question. She scored a game-high seven goals — including one with 31 seconds remaining in the first half to give Denmark the lead for good — and paced the Scandinavians to a 27-22 victory, reports AP.

With that, Denmark finished 3-0 in Pool A in the preliminary round and, as the group's top seed, advanced to meet Norway in Thursday's semifinals.

Hungary slipped to 2-1 and will have to face Pool B winner and defending champion South Korea.

Big shows take back seat

ATLANTA, July 31: From the new to the nearly extinct, smaller sports were in the spotlight Tuesday at the Olympics. But they were overshadowed by news that a "hero" security guard may have set up last week's terrorist bombing at the heart of the Atlanta Games, reports AP.

While Tuesday's events involved sports of lower stature, no competitors came bigger than 166-kilogram (365.5 pound) Russian super heavy-weight lifter Andrei Chmerkin.

He broke one world record and squallied another on the way to lifting a total of 457 kilos (1,008.5 pounds) to claim the gold medal and title as the strongest Olympian.

Mountain biking made its debut on the dirt tracks and favourites Paola Pezzo of Italy and Bart Jan Brentjens of the Netherlands won the inaugural gold.

A sellout crowd was on hand to see the United States win the softball gold medal, beating China 3-1 in the final. Australia took the bronze in Tuesday's other debutante sport.

Another small sport under threat of being scrapped due to lack of interest is modern pentathlon. Officials held the five-event competition over one day this time, instead of two days as in the past, to try to increase the drama.

After nearly 13 hours of competition, Alexander Parygin of Kazakhstan came back in the final meters of the cross country to defeat Russian Eduard Zenovka for the gold.

"I felt Eduard had won and I was thanking God for letting me win the silver," Parygin said. "Then I found some more power, but I can't believe I am an Olympic champion."

The United States has 25 golds and a total of 66 medals, while Russia is second with 19 golds and 41 overall. France has 13 golds and China a dozen.

The Games themselves found some extra power Tuesday to bounce back from the terrorist bomb that killed one woman and injured 111 other people early Saturday at the Olympic Centennial Park. Tears and shouts of celebration marked the park's reopening Tuesday with officials and spectators saying it was important to show that adversity could be overcome. But few people were prepared for the news that followed.

The security guard who alerted police to a suspicious package and helped evacuate many people before it exploded became a focus of the investigation, three days after being lauded a "hero" for his alertness.

Drug use surfaced again Tuesday, with a Russian woman swimmer and two Lithuanian cycling officials getting kicked out of the Olympics in connection with the drug bromantan, which can be used as a stimulant or a masking agent to hide other drugs. Three others were disqualified for the new drug on Monday, including two Russian athletes who lodged an appeal that will be considered later this week.

China got a gold from a familiar source — table tennis. Kong Linghui and Liu Guoliang beat compatriots and defending champions Lu Lin and Wang Tao 21-8, 18-21, 21-19, 21-17 in the men's doubles.

Two near-bellylops put world champion Tan Shuping of China out of the springboard competition Tuesday but compatriot Fu Mingxia kept alive her hopes of securing a rare Olympic double.

Following Tuesday's preliminaries, Olympic platform champion Fu stayed on course to become the first woman to win both the springboard and platform events in one Olympics since Germany's Ingrid Kramer did it in 1960.

QUIPS & QUOTES

ATLANTA, July 31 (AP): Some notable quotes Tuesday at the Atlanta Olympics:

"We're here not to wallow in tragedy, but to celebrate a triumph — a triumph of human spirit."

Andrew Young, an Olympic official and former mayor of Atlanta, at the reopening of Centennial Olympic Park three days after a terrorist bomb there killed one person and injured more than 100.

"It didn't destroy us. Look at all the people here. The park has more meaning now."

Peter Leyra, an American among the thousands of visitors who thronged to Centennial Olympic Park on its reopening.

"People want me to run the relay and they think I have the right to run. That's where the pressure is coming from, it's not coming from me."

Carl Lewis, who has a record-tying nine Olympic gold medals after winning the long jump at Atlanta and wants to be put on the US 400-metre relay team for a chance at a 10th.

"It was a very relaxing day ashore and we are very, very happy with our gold medal win."

Spain's Fernando Leon as he and teammate Jose Luis Ballester sat out of the final race of Tornado class Olympic sailing competition because they already were assured of victory.

"In the last 10 minutes I got a little angry with the players for not doing the things that they ought to have done. But in the first 75.80 minutes they were excellent."

Coach Daniel Passarella after his Argentine team advanced to Olympic soccer's gold medal game with a 2-0 victory over Portugal.

"It takes a lot of effort to organize the Games as badly as Atlanta bid."

Fani Pali-Petralia, who was the Greek sports minister when the International Olympic Committee picked Atlanta over Athens in 1990.

"He should have been kicked off the court for the things he was saying."

South Africa tennis player Wayne Ferreira, speaking about a penalty assessed against American opponent Andre Agassi during Agassi's 7-5, 4-6, 7-5 quarterfinal victory Tuesday.

"That was about the only way he was going to beat me."

ATLANTA SNIPPETS

AN OLYMPIC REVOLT

ATLANTA, July 31: Olympic modern pentathlon competitors staged a revolt against Olympic organisers on Tuesday and threatened to call off their event halfway through, reports AFP.

After completing the shooting, fencing and swimming, the athletes were being taken by bus 30 miles to the riding venue when their vehicle broke down. Organisers sent another bus without air-conditioning. In the midday heat of Atlanta and after competing since early morning, the athletes refused point blank to take their seats.

The mutiny lasted half an hour before organisers backed down and alternative transport was arranged.

An air-conditioned bus finally arrived and the weary competitors arrived late for the riding and the cross country running sections at the Georgia International Horse Park.

For the first time at the Olympics, the five disciplines in modern pentathlon, normally spread over five days, are telescoped into one.

Competition started at 7 am and were due to end more than 12 hours later.

The Dhaka League runners-up Mohammedan Sporting Club is scheduled to take on Electricity Club of Laos at the Dhaka Stadium on August 24 and the away encounter will be held in Laos on September 7.

According to sources at the Dhaka Stadium, Mohammedans formally informed the Bangladesh Football Federation (BFF) yesterday expressing their desire to organise the match.

'Dream Team' in semis

ATLANTA, July 31: The US 'Dream Team' defeated Oscar Schmidt's Brazilians 98-75 on Tuesday and Australia pulled off a dream comeback against tough Croatia to reach the semifinals of the Olympic basketball tournament, reports Reuters.

Despite their attempts to introduce some razzle-dazzle into a contest that was never in doubt, the Americans were asked if they found the game a little boring.

Schmidt, two games away from his Olympic farewell in his record fifth games, is the all-time leading Olympic scorer, the scoring leader in this tournament and was the high scorer in the game with 26 points.

The United States next face Australia, who shocked Croatia 73-71 thanks to forward Tony Ronaldson's four-point play 34 second from the end.

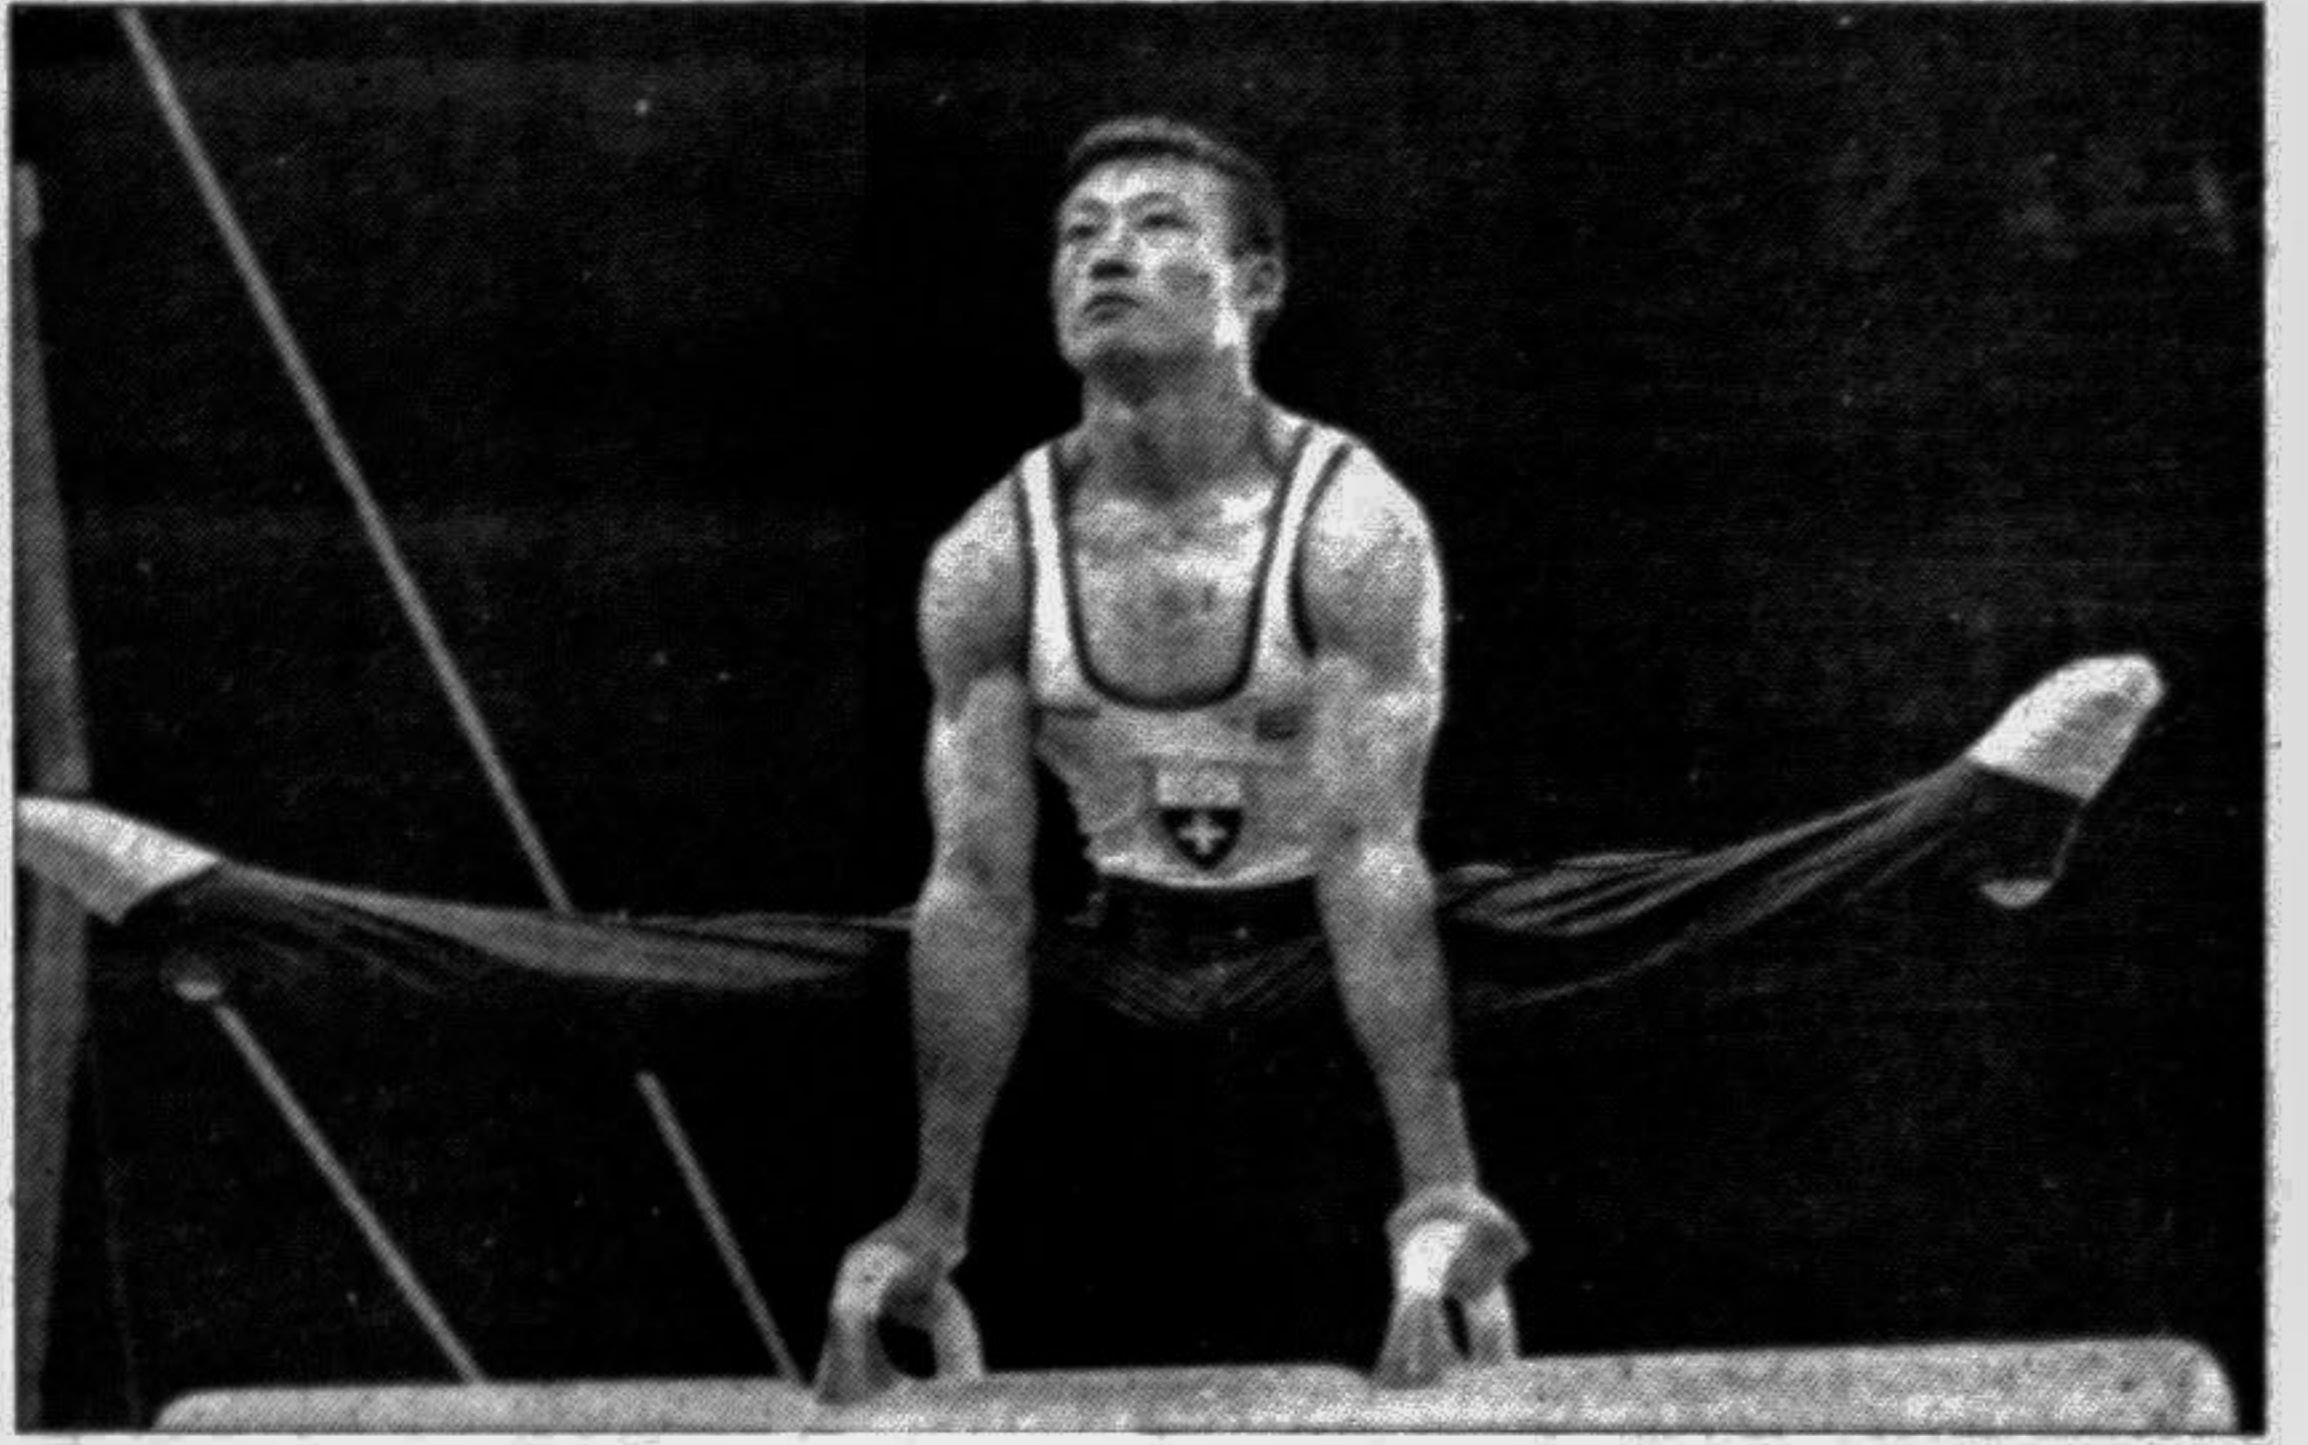

On the other side of the quarter-finals, Yugoslavia, like the United States 6-0 and still without any real test, demolished China 128-61 to set up a semifinal showdown with their long-time rivals Lithuania.

Shearer hits the headlines

LONDON, July 31: English premier league side Newcastle beat Manchester United in the race to sign Alan Shearer when the England striker signed a 15-million-pound world record deal with the club on Monday, reports Reuters.

Manchester United had offered around 12 million pounds (£18.65 million dollars) for the European championship top scorer but Newcastle boss Kevin Keegan topped their offer with a five-year deal which takes Shearer back to the city of his birth.

The previous world record transfer fee came earlier this month when Brazilian striker Ronaldo agreed a move from Dutch giants PSV Eindhoven to Barcelona in Spain thought to be worth 19.5 million dollars.

Agassi keeps US afloat

ATLANTA, July 31: With defeat one curse word away, Andre Agassi restrained his tongue and overtook his opponent.

After two code violations for profanity in the third set Tuesday, Agassi won the final four games to beat Wayne Ferreira of South Africa 7-5, 4-6, 7-5 in the Olympic quarterfinals. A third code violation would have meant default for the top-seeded American, reports AP.

"He should have been kicked off the court for the things he was saying," said Ferreira, the No. 5 seed.

"That," Agassi responded, "was about the only way he was going to beat me."

Agassi next faces wild-card Leander Paes of India, a 6-1, 7-5 winner over Italian Renzo Furlan. Paes said he had been inspired by the desire to emulate his father Leslie Clutius who won an Olympic hockey medal in 1972.

Paes, 23 and ranked 126, has never won a title of any kind since his junior days when he was ranked number one in the world.

"One thing I've always wanted to do was emulate my dad's bronze medal," Paes said. "I used to see that hanging in different."

Trailing 5-3, Agassi held serve and then broke Ferreira with the help of four unforced errors by the South African. Agassi held again to lead the set for the first time, 6-5, then closed out the match when Ferreira made four more unforced errors in the final game.

The partisan crowd erupted as an angry Ferreira flung his racket into his chair. Agassi bowed several times, doffed his cap and led a chant of "U-S-A. U-S-A."

The umpire missed probably a dozen calls the whole match. "Agassi said 'I needed something to turn it around. I got upset and got into it. And I stayed focused and I gave myself a chance to win.'"

In women's doubles, Gigi and Mary Joe Fernandez, bidding to repeat their Barcelona gold-medal performance, advanced, to the semifinals by beating Valda Lake and Clare Wood of England 6-2, 6-1. The top-seeded Americans play Manon Bollegraf and Brenda Schultz-McCarthy of the Netherlands on Wednesday.

In the semifinals of women's singles, best friends will become foes Wednesday when No. 7 seed Mary Joe Fernandez plays US teammate Lindsay Davenport, who is seeded ninth. The other matchup pits No. 3 seed Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario of Spain against No. 6 Jana Novotna of the Czech Republic.

Indonesia's double trouble defeated Susanti 11-9, 11-8, in Thursday's final.

Top seed Susanti never really got into her stride against Bang, her victim in the Barcelona final.

"I made a lot of mistakes. It's really my fault," Susanti said after losing to an opponent she had dominated until last year, winning 16 of their first 18 encounters.

I analysed all of Susi's skills on video, so I could easily read Susi's shots today," Bang said. "I watched Susi and studied her techniques and there was always a little missing," said Bang.

The Indonesians were out of men's singles. In Tuesday's semifinals, Poul-Erik Hoyer-Larsen of Denmark beat Indonesia's Heryanto Arbi 15-11, 15-6. He had eliminated Indonesia's defending gold medalist Allen Budi Kusuma earlier.

Hoyer-Larsen will play for the 1996 gold against China's Dong Jion, a 15-6, 18-16 winner over Malaysia's Rashid Sidek.

In bronze medal games, S Antonius and Denny Kantono of Indonesia won the won in men's doubles with a 15-4, 12-15, 15-8 victory over Beng Kiang Soo and Kim Her Tan of Malaysia.

The gold and silver medals will be decided Wednesday. The men's and women's final both will be played Thursday.

Olympic TT results

ATLANTA, July 31: China's Qiao Hong, the world number two, suffered an upset defeat in the women's table tennis semifinals on Tuesday, setting the stage for a first Olympic final between arch foes China and Taiwan, reports Reuters.

Chen Jiong, a former Chinese table tennis star and 1988 Olympic gold medalist who left China to play for Taiwan under its Olympic name Chinese Taipei, crushed Qiao 3-0 and will face another former teammate, world number one Deng Yaping, in today's final.

Chen is one of a flock of high profile Chinese players who have left the country to play under other flags, and her departure to play for Beijing's nationalist rivals in Taipei was particularly galling for China's high-profile national sports system.

Qiao, who had already repeated her 1992 Olympic victory by winning the Atlanta gold in women's doubles with partner Deng Yaping, said she was not upset failing to reach the final.
