

Dhaka Day by Day

Autobiography of an Urban Area

by Chandra Shekhar Das

In present sights that do not always make sense. That is what a lot of people think of me. It does not bother me because I along with other inanimate objects cannot think of what humans mean by thinking. Evidently, thoughts are a process we are better off without. But that I do not make sense in my present condition is a gross violation of copyright.

I heard a young man muttering it the other day as the puller of the rickshaw he was aboard was trying hard to get the wheels out of a wound, a hollow in my body. The rickshawpuller could have spared me the pain of the collective weight of men and vehicle and also themselves of the ironic tyranny of two elemental agents — water and heat. But he did not probably, because he had no mental preparation. Before approaching me, it probably did not dawn on him that even under such an oppressing sun, there could be a place in the city where a miniature of the river Buriganga could have sprung suddenly.

Trust me. Trust the lovely concave of Dhaka's topography at or around Shantinagar. If Jupiter visits me in the form of mollifying poison, I love to cling to the cool touch; the remains of rain, the memories of an ashen sky. East, west, north south, try to enter me from any direction and I will baffle you if you are discerning and discriminatory about water and if only I have had a shower in 24 hours time. Actually, you humans have a lot of things to learn from me. I am not discriminating. In a body of water that I hold up almost everyday throughout the monsoon, you would get everything from porcupine's peel of the national fruit to human faces. Celestial tears occasioned by the rainy season make a huge Martini to toast at the health of democracy. Even the three witches' broth in Shakespeare's Macbeth does not hold candle to the stink and foul concoction in the water on my body. You name it! I have 'em all. The steady source of seasoning is of course the DCC container full to the brim with filth. Have you read Eliot? Yes, the TS Eliot. Remember his rivers? Oil and tar... Chicken coops, garlic... I think I am an improvement, an enhancement on what you would dub as unpoetic inventory of his poetry. Actually, I am a symbol of the basic tenet of democracy, diversity and unity in diversity too. Even old Whitman would have struggled to discover a unifying symbol like me. I let the vehicles furrow me fleeing and leave oil and tar; I let men make water and ammonia. All these acts of human comedy are possible because once deposited, the water does not subside easily, thanks to the eternally clogged drainage system. However, living with such diversity has started taking its toll. I have badly lost skin at places; my flesh and bones are out like a grotesque grin. You see, I don't mind. Most of those who take a rickshaw ride like that young man seemingly do. The other day a rickshaw hit an unseen underwater wound and just gave way. The passengers took an unwanted dip in my brown water. Their fellow humans broke into laughter on the pavements. Rejoiced, reached out to join them to express my solidarity.

PM inaugurates 8500-line exchange Rajshahi div enters era of digital telecommunication

Rajshahi division entered the era of digital telecommunication with the installation of a 8500-line digital telephone exchange yesterday, reports BSS.

Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina inaugurated the digital telephone exchange, the first in Rajshahi division, by making a call from the cabinet room of Bangladesh Secretariat to Post and Telecommunications Minister Mohammad Nasim who was present in Rajshahi.

The Prime Minister informed the minister that she was in a meeting of ECNEC and asked him to convey her greetings and thank to the people of Rajshahi. Sheikh Hasina said that the digital telephone exchange will help flourish economic development, as well as fulfill the hopes and aspirations of the people of the area.

The exchange, set up at a cost of Tk 64 crore, will now replace the age-old 3500-line analogue system. Rajshahi digital exchange will have direct connection with 90 circuits through Dhaka for overseas calls.

Rajshahi City Corporation Mayor Mizanur Rahman Minu, Fazilatunnessa Talukdar, MP, acting secretary, Post and Telecommunication MM Reza, and chairman, Bangladesh

Telegraph and Telephone Board M H Chowdhury addressed the inaugural ceremony in Rajshahi.

Director general, Bangladesh Post Office B Zaman, a representative of Alcatel, Vice Chancellor, Rajshahi University Prof M Yusuf Ali, high officials, political leaders and elite of the city were present on the occasion.

Mohammad Nasim, in his speech, said that the present government under the leadership of Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina wanted to make the country prosperous. In this connection, he sought support and cooperation of all, irrespective of party affiliation. The minister said, "We have enough resources and if we work sincerely, we could develop our country like Singapore and Malaysia."

He stressed the need for the development of human resources through proper utilization. He said that our main objective was to work unitedly to materialise the dream of Bangladesh Sheikh Mujibur Rahman to make Bangladesh "a real Sonar Bangla." Without economic development, national development was not possible, he added.

HC division's judgement on DUJ case stayed

The Appellate Division has ordered stay of the High Court Division's judgement passed in a civil revision case filed by Abul Kalam Azad and Azizul Islam Bhuiyan, president and general secretary of the Dhaka Union of Journalists (DUJ) respectively, a House of Advocates press release said yesterday, reports BSS.

Justice Bimalendu Bikash Roy Chowdhury of the Appellate Division on September 2 passed the order of stay upon a petition for leave to appeal, and fixed the matter to be heard on November 12 in the regular bench of the Appellate Division.

As a result of the stay order, all further proceedings of Title Suit No 171 of 1993, pending before the 1st Court of Subordinate Judge, Dhaka, shall be stayed.

The civil revision was filed challenging the order of the trial court recalling the plaintiff-witness No 1, Ruhul Amin Gazi for the second time at the final stage of the trial.

The High Court Division upon the civil revision issued a rule and ordered stay of all further proceedings of the title suit, but on May 8 last, by a judgement, discharged the rule.

One Zahirul Huq and Amin Gazi filed the said title suit praying for a declaration that their sangad is the legal sangad of the Dhaka Union of Journalists.

Advocate Subrata Chowdhury assisted by Advocate Promila Biswas, S M Asadullah Tarique, Purabi Rani Sharma Gobinda Chandra Tagore, Shahinur Islam and Zannatul Ferdous conducted the case and Md Afiah Hossain, advocate on-record, appeared on behalf of the petitioners.

WORLD BANK VACANCY

Position: National Consultant (Public Health)

Background The World Bank has signed an agreement with the Government of Bangladesh (GOB) to execute a Technical Assistance Project for the preparation of the Fifth Health and Population Project (FHPP). FHPP may well be the largest assisted project in the world in this sector. A Project Preparation Cell (PPC) with two long-term consultants, an international and a national, is being set up in the Ministry of Health and Family Welfare (MOHFW) under the supervision of the Joint Chief (Planning). In addition, several short-term consultancies will be commissioned for the purpose.

Tasks: The national consultant will work with the long-term international consultant and generally assist in preparing the FHPP, specifically, she/he will (i) assist in preparing all necessary GOB documentation, including the PCPs, PPs, TAPPs and other reports, (ii) assist MOHFW in preparing a realistic budget and costing the PPs and TAPPs, (iii) collect all necessary technical literature, other research material and data for setting up a project research centre, (iv) liaise with the Government agencies, NGOs, private sector organizations, and technical and other professionals to be involved in project preparation, (v) render all technical/other assistance as required by the PPC Coordinator and the expatriate consultant, and (vi) carry out any other duties related to the preparation of the FHPP which the PPC coordinator or the Expatriate Consultant may consider necessary.

Qualifications and Experience

The selected candidate will be a Bangladeshi national with a post-graduate degree in public health and at least 10 years of experience in health and family planning sector in Bangladesh. She/he would possess a thorough knowledge of sector needs, underlying issues, fluency in written and spoken English and good writing ability, and be able to work effectively with international and GOB counterparts. Applicants with a medical background will be preferred. Applicants below the age of 40 or above 60 are unlikely to be considered.

The assignment carries an attractive salary package. The selected candidate will be recruited on a one-year contract which would be extended subject to satisfactory performance.

Applications with complete Curriculum Vitae and contact telephone number should be addressed to The World Bank Resident Mission, Ref: National Consultant (Public Health), 3A, Paribagh, Dhaka-1000.

Deadline: Applications should be submitted by September 15, 1996.
