

Indians snub SL's hospitality

COLOMBO, Sept 5: India's four-nation tournament squad ruffled diplomatic and cricket feathers Wednesday when they skipped a Sri Lankan government reception to honour the participants in the ongoing tournament, reports AP.

The Indian team said it could not attend as its invitation card to the reception came too late.

Hosts Sri Lanka denied the card was delivered late.

The missing Indians drew criticism from the host, Minister of Youth Affairs and Sports S B Dissanayake and three other cricketing nations who are here to take part in the four-nation cricket trophy.

The invitation by Dissanayake was to honour, all the four cricket teams in Colombo. Players from Australia, Zimbabwe and Sri Lanka attended in full strength at the party held in the high security State Guest House at Visumpaya.

But the Indians, who have a crucial match against Australia Thursday, were missing.

"I really wish our friends from India were here, like the Australians," Dissanayake told the gathering after an hour had passed at the party.

Sri Lanka's Foreign Minister, Lakshman Kadirgama, who took time off to attend the party, said he had come specially to meet some of the Indians cricketers.

"Why they are not here, did we do any mistake," said Kadirgama, a former sportsman and an avid cricketer.

India's Ambassador in Colombo, Nareshwar Dayal, in an effort to defuse the crisis, said he was told that the Indian team wanted to rest ahead of their match against Australia.

An Azhar aberration!

COLOMBO, Sept 5: Former Indian skipper Mohammad Azharuddin, suffering from a toothache, had a brush with the law when he refused to show police his driving licence, reports AP.

Azharuddin was driving through Colombo on Wednesday to the dentist's clinic when police stopped him and asked to see his licence.

Police and military soldiers carrying rifles routinely check vehicles because of an ongoing ethnic war between Tamil separatists and government troops, which has left 45,000 people dead in 13 years.

Security is particularly tight in Colombo because of the presence of the cricketers for the four-nation tournament.

Azharuddin apparently was irritated and refused to show his licence, said an Indian diplomat on condition of anonymity. He had borrowed the car from Sri Lankan captain Arjuna Ranatunga.

The Indian High Commission (embassy) had to intervene to prevent the incident from snowballing. A diplomat hastened to the scene and told the police about the identity of their detainee.

"The policemen... felt very bad they had detained the popular former captain," said the diplomat. "Some of them told him they were sorry and took his autograph," he said.

No charges were pressed. "Nothing would have happened if Azharuddin had explained who he was," the diplomat said.

Azharuddin was not available for comment. His telephone at the Lanka Oberoi Hotel remained unanswered.

Border-Gavaskar trophy

SYDNEY, Sept 5: The Australian Cricket Board and the Board of Control for Cricket in India have agreed to institute a new trophy for Test match competition between the countries, reports AP.

The Border-Gavaskar trophy, named in honour of the only batsmen in Test history to have scored more than 10,000 runs will be presented for the first time to the winner of next month's one-off Test match in New Delhi.

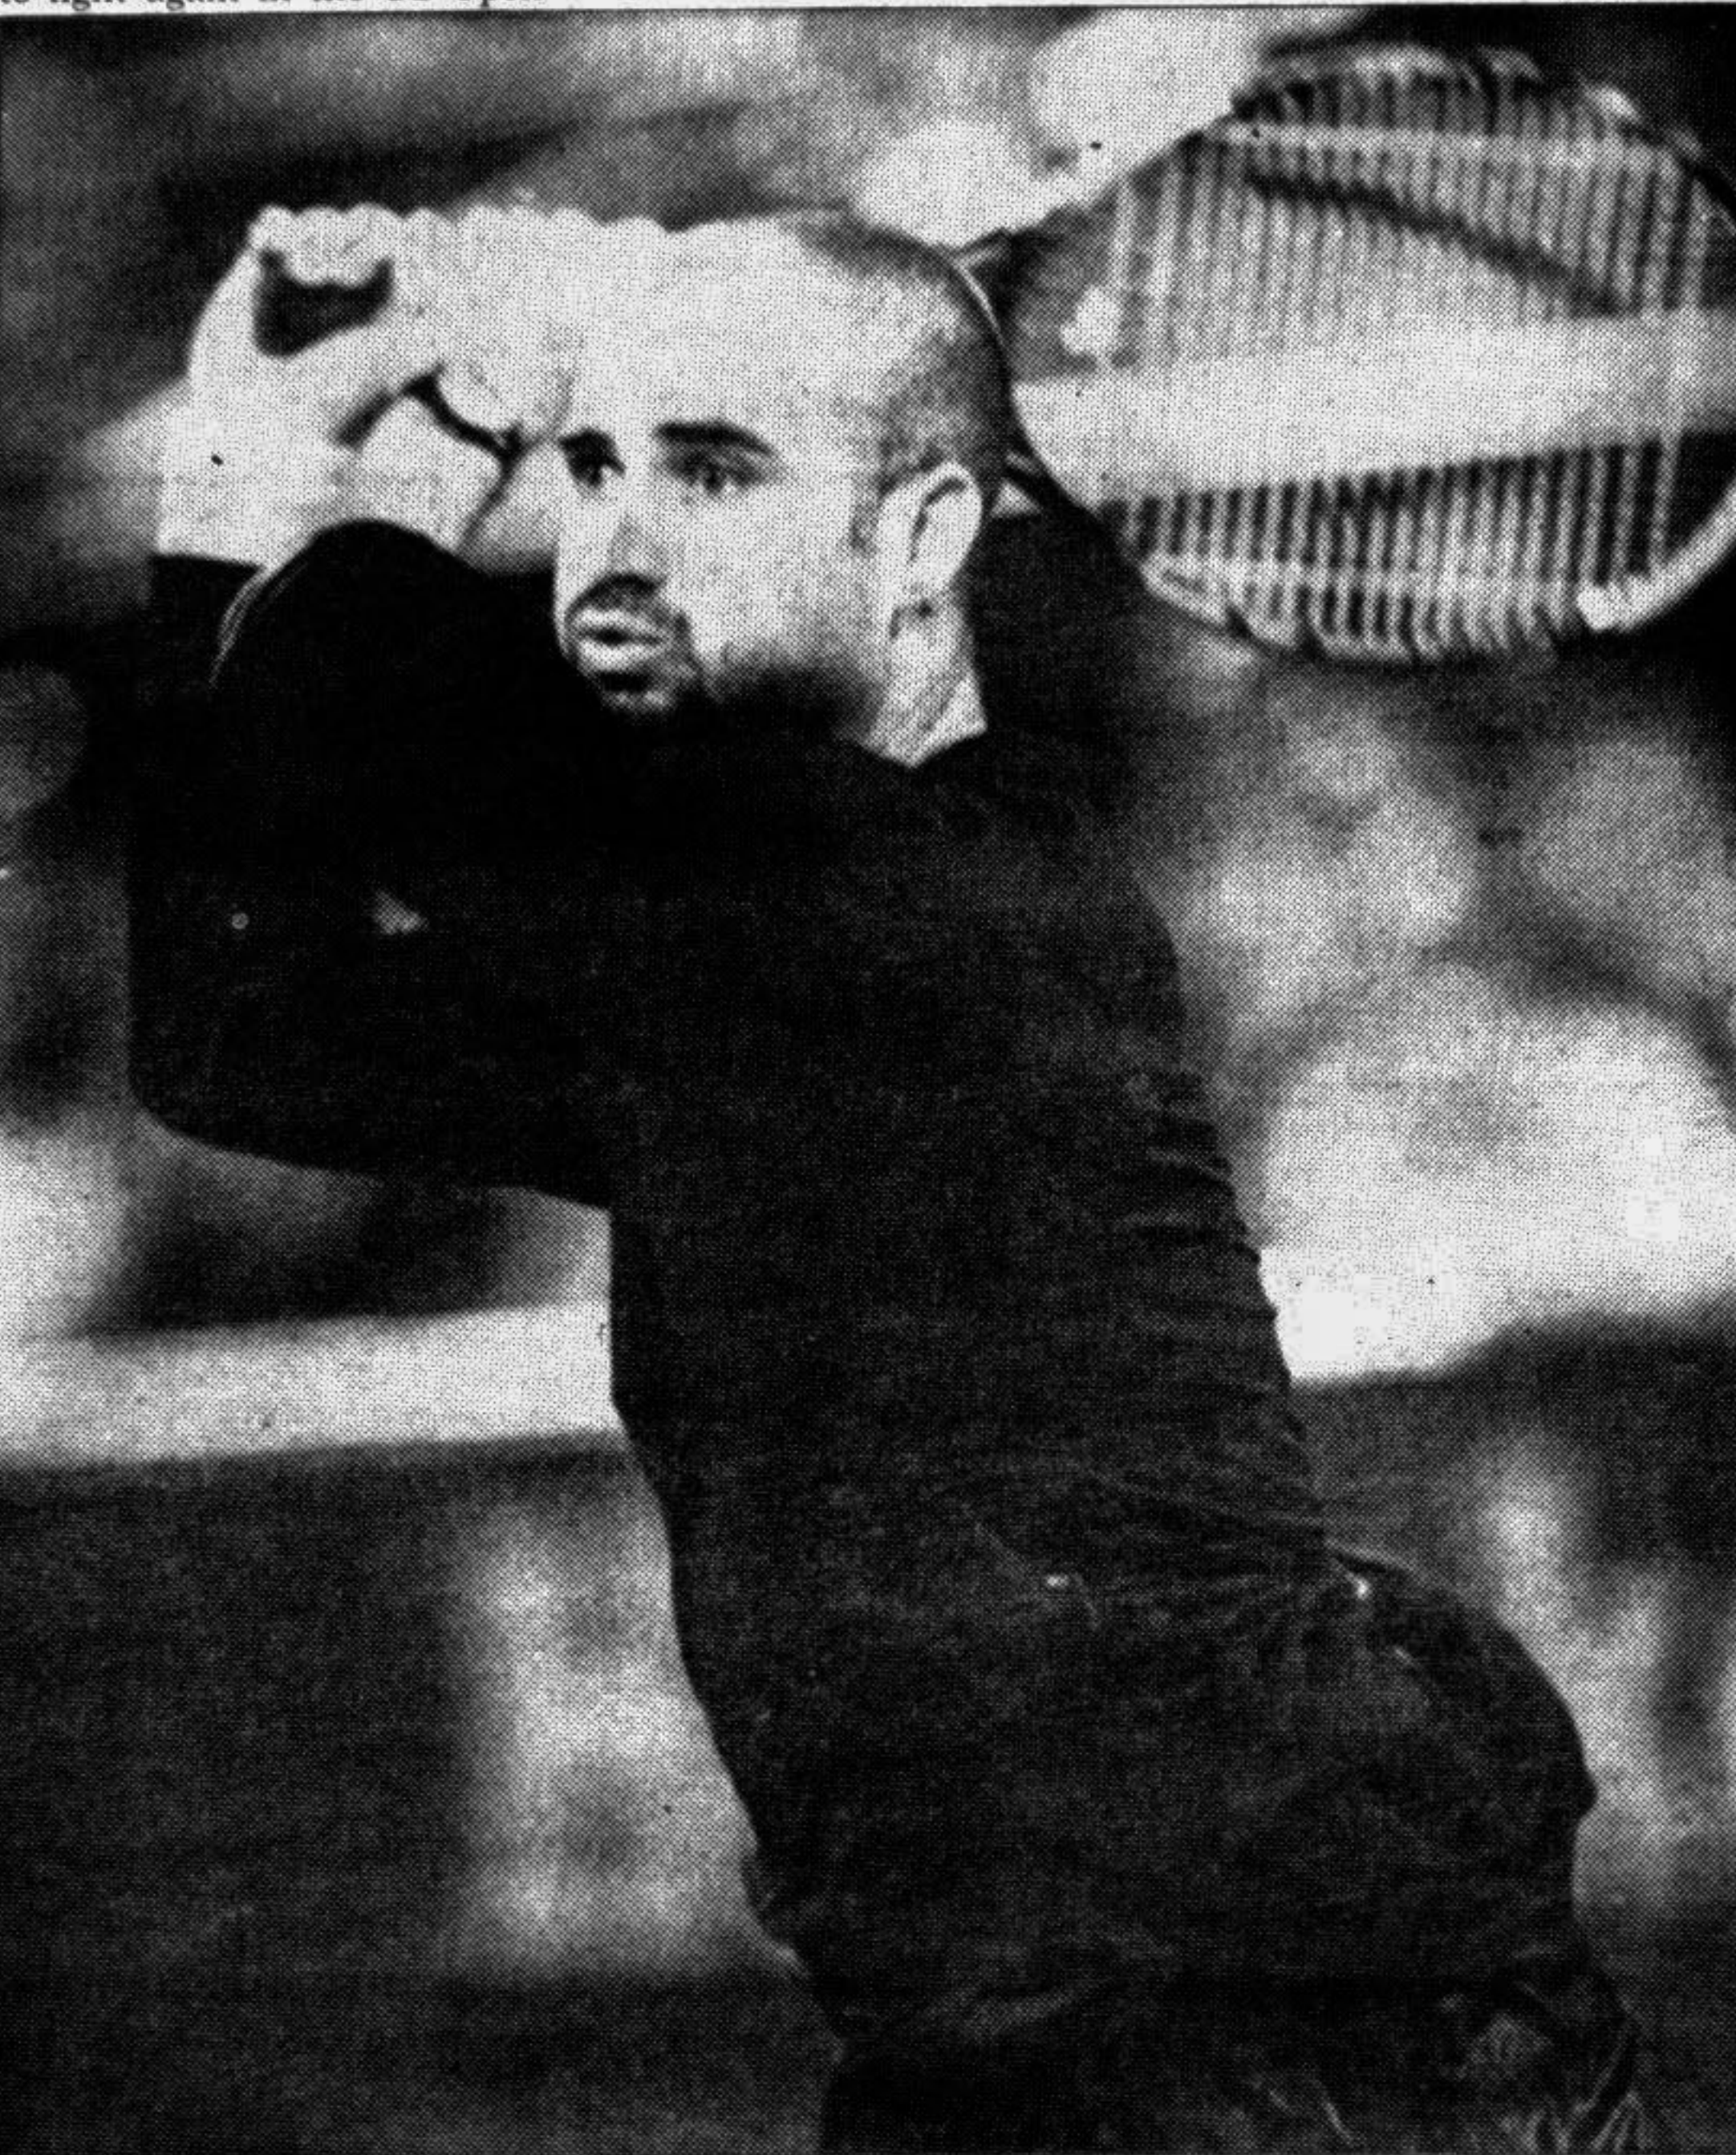

ACB chief executive officer Graham Halbish said the design and the funding of the Border-Gavaskar trophy had been overseen by the Australia-India Council.

Halbish said Allan Border would travel to India next month to join Sunil Gavaskar in New Delhi for the Test match and to present the new trophy.

Agassi passes muster

NEW YORK, Sept 5: It was a bruising battle with firepower from both sides.

And when they finished rocketing forehands and blasting backhands, Andre Agassi was still standing, ready to fight again in the US Open.

US tennis star Andre Agassi plays a double-fisted back hand against Austrian Thomas Muster during their US Open quarterfinal clash at the Flushing Meadows on September 4. Agassi won the match 6-2, 7-5, 4-6, 6-2.

Thomas Muster came out on the short end, 6-2, 7-5, 4-6, 6-2, Wednesday night, report agencies.

"I am usually the one that is dominating the game, and he dominated me today," the third-seeded Muster admitted. "That is what he does very well on this surface."

Attempting to reach the men's singles title match for the third consecutive year, the third-seeded Agassi produced his finest tennis of the tournament. He had to.

In one of Saturday's men's semifinals, Agassi will play second-seeded Michael Chang, who defeated Spain's Javier Sanchez 7-5, 6-3, 6-2 (7-6), 6-3 on Wednesday. The other semifinal pairings will be completed Thursday when top-seeded Pete Sampras plays Alex Corretja and No 4 Goran Ivanisevic goes against two-time champion Stefan Edberg.

Muster, a clay court master, puts his stamp on a match with iron-fisted groundstrokes, weapons that have earned him six titles this year and the world's No 2 ranking.

But he more than met his match on the hard court in Agassi, whose up-and-down year has been on the upswing since he won the Olympic gold medal in Atlanta last month.

"He was playing inside the court and I was pushed back," Muster said.

Agassi agreed. "Thomas likes to dictate play. If I dictate the play, he's not as comfortable on the de-number one in the world if he wins the US Open this weekend but the number three-ranked player has a different goal in mind.

"I have had a certain mentality of going out and just giving my best and working hard and trying to improve, and I don't think I should really get away

Rain ruins India-Aussie affair

COLOMBO, Sept 5: The crucial cricket match between India and Australia was called off Thursday after rain repeatedly forced delays and left the outfield soggy and the pitch damp, reports AP.

The game will now be played Friday and if that does not happen, the team with the best run rate will play Sri Lanka in the final of the four-nation cricket tournament Saturday.

Dozens of Sri Lankan workers used brooms, buckets and sponges to dry the outfield after removing huge plastic sheets that were put up during the rain.

Game organisers had first said the match may start at 11.30 am (0500 gm) if there was no more rain. But it began to rain around noon, forcing further delay.

Under the rules guiding the tournament, a minimum of 25 overs must be bowled in each innings.

The organisers had said they will wait until 2 pm (0730 gm) to decide if the match should be postponed to Friday, but decided against that when it looked as if the rain may not stop.

If it rains Friday too, the team with the best run rate will go to the finals. Australia and India both have two points each, but Australia enjoys a better run rate (1.05) than India's (0.02).

The rain came as a surprise as this Indian Ocean republic has been experiencing drought.

Cricket thrown into a spin!

TRURO (England), Sept 5: A 12-year-old girl has put cricket traditionalists in a spin after being chosen to play for a boys' team on a tour to South Africa on Wednesday, reports AP.

Off-break bowler Laura Harper will join 13 boys on the Cornish Schools under-13 tour of South Africa next February after being picked as one of the country's brightest cricketing prospects.

Laura is rated as the best girl cricketer ever to emerge in the area and specialises in spinning out boys who are convinced they can slog her gentle off spinners.

She was spotted by the county selectors as she made a series of impressive performances at Truro School and now her mother Sharon is planning to accompany her on the South African adventure.

Laura has proved the equal of the boys in her side and has played for her county since she was 11, but she nearly missed out on the tour because she is a girl.

"She was only allowed to go if her mother agreed to accompany her on the two-week trip where they will stay with host families from the teams they play against."

Mike stays in the saddle

LONDON, Sept 5: After a series victory over India but a 2-0 loss to Pakistan, Michael Atherton will again captain England in the upcoming tours of Zimbabwe and New Zealand, reports AP.

The 28-year-old Lancashire opener, who replaced Graham Gooch in 1993, will lead the team in all five Tests leaving him one short of Peter May's record of 41 games as captain.

The two Tests in Zimbabwe are in Bulawayo Dec. 18-22 and Harare Dec. 26-30. The squad then goes to New Zealand for Tests at Auckland Jan. 24-28, Wellington Feb. 6-10 and Christchurch Feb. 14-18.

After that, England hosts powerhouse Australia in the Ashes series in the summer and Atherton will have to count on good performances during the two winter tours if he is to keep the job.

Steffi surges into semis

NEW YORK, Sept 5: From the early days when he first put a racket in her hand to the golden years when he managed her millions, Peter Graf was usually by his daughter Steffi's side. Not now.

On Thursday, with Steffi Graf pursuing yet another championship at the US Open, the former used-car salesman was in court, accused of evading taxes on 28 million dollars of his daughter's income, report agencies.

Steffi Graf isn't talking about her father's tax evasion trial, which begins today in Germany, but her opponents are amazed at the world number one's singular ability to keep her focus on the Open.

"I can't think of anybody who is having a more difficult time," said Austrian Judith Wiesner after losing a quarter-final to Graf 7-5, 6-3 on the eve of Peter Graf's trial.

"I don't know what she is thinking, but sometimes I am amazed how anybody can shrug off all that stuff and just go out and play that well. It must be very difficult, but obviously she can."

The top seed and defending Open champion was tight-lipped when asked to comment on her father's plight, brushing off questions with a brusque, "I don't want to talk about it."

But the situation has to be weighing heavily on her mind as she struggles at times to keep her focus on tennis.

"I guess for some reason it's a little difficult at the moment to focus very well on the (tennis) court," she said without ever mentioning her trauma.

Wiesner, a right-hander from Austria ranked 24th in the world, made Graf work for every point and every game. There were only three love games in the match, and Wiesner served one of those in a match that lasted just six minutes.

It was Wiesner who jumped on top, breaking Graf at 15 in the fifth game when the German pounded a forehand into the net. When she held at 30, Wiesner led 4-2.

Graf, however, hasn't had 20 Grand Slam tournament titles just handed to her. She held at 15, broke Wiesner at 30, then STEFFI GRAF held at 30 to take a 5-4 lead. In the sixth game, Wiesner saved one set point, but not the second as Graf closed out the hard fought, 42-minute, first set battle.

The best was yet to come.

Graf served to begin the second set and quickly took a 40-30 lead, the last point coming when she boomed a service winner down the middle.

Wiesner, though, was not through.

Five times the Austrian reached break point. Five times Graf staved off the break. Then, her big forehand pounded the ball into the far reaches of Louis Armstrong Stadium Court and Graf finally held.

Perhaps thinking of her missed opportunities, Wiesner lost her next two service games as Graf took a 4-0 lead. Wiesner broke back in the fifth game, and although she continued pressuring her opponent, she never was able to truly threaten the defending champion.

Needless to say, Graf has managed to keep playing great tennis during the entire ordeal, having won all three Grand Slams she has played since her father was jailed just prior to last year's US Open.

Natasha Zvereva, Graf's third-round victim, suggested that the tennis court is a sanctuary for the troubled Wimbledon and French Open champion.

"Everybody needs what I call a getaway and maybe the tennis court is her getaway," Zvereva said.

In beating Wiesner for the 10th time in 10 matches, the top-seeded Graf played just well enough to win, not dominate as she had in her three previous matches. Still, Graf is far from satisfied with her game.

"I haven't played the best tennis in the first few rounds, but I know when I get to the important matches, I'll be up there," said Graf, who won her fourth US Open last year.

Graf, 27, is going for her 21st Grand Slam singles title, which would leave her three behind record-holder Margaret Smith Court.

Stage set for Serie A

MILAN, Sept 4: Life in Italy will return to fever pitch this weekend, as mighty AC Milan and European champions Juventus kick off the new football season in the Serie A, reports AP.

With Italy's humiliating exit at the European Championships now a distant memory, the spotlight returns to Milan. Juve and a handful of other candidates for the world's most coveted league trophy.

Milan won the Serie A title four times in the last five seasons under Fabio Capello, but new coach Oscar Tabarez from Uruguay is already struggling to find the right combination.

Juventus have reshuffled their attack after Gianluca Vialli and "Silver Fox" Fabrizio Ravanelli went to England, while much is expected from Fiorentina and a new-look Inter Milan.

But the biggest changes have been on the drawing board and the rule book.

Fantasy and foreigners are the two watchwords for the 1996-97 season, as top coaches seek more creative, attacking football and clubs are free to field all the European community players they want.

Much of the interest will centre on the "Fantasista"—the creative genius playing behind two strikers in an all-out, three-man attack.

In pre-season matches, AC Milan's Roberto Baggio, Alessandro Del Piero of Juventus and Inter Milan's Yuri Djorkaeff, drafted in from Paris St Germain, have all been in sparkling form.

Baggio makes a welcome return to the playmaker role he had with Juventus and the Italian World Cup team in 1994, while Del Piero has been freed from midfield duties with the arrival of Frenchman Zinedine Zidane.

Other top sides have had the same ideas. Djorkaeff takes on the role at Inter behind the likes of Ivan Zamorano and Marco Branca, while Parma are pulling Gianfranco Zola back from the frontline to occupy the job he did at Napoli as understudy to Diego Maradona.

Zamorano, Djorkaeff, Aaron Winter, Paul Ince, the teams may be Italian but the players certainly aren't as the latter squad this season clearly shows.

English coach Roy Hodgson could conceivably find only a handful of Italians this season, following last year's Bosman ruling which outlawed limitations on the number of European players.

AC Milan have also taken advantage of the changes, but so far Tabarez has less to show for it.

His team lost the Italian Super Cup to Fiorentina last month and were lucky to come away with a 1-1 draw in the Italian Cup, a second round against modest Empoli of the Serie B.

After the Fiorentina match, he said, "It's simply unacceptable to let any team, whoever they are, have 12 shots at our goal."

The defence and midfield, rejigged after the arrival of Michael Reiziger and Edgar Davids from Ajax Amsterdam, will need even closer scrutiny after skipper Franco Baresi was ruled out of the first month of the season.

Baresi, the 36-year-old symbol of AC Milan, badly twisted his ankle in last week's 2-0 win over Empoli in the Cup replay.

Juventus have looked far more promising over the summer, as have Hodgson's Inter Milan.

Juve coach Marcello Lippi will look to a re-shaped attack to ensure his team do not rest on their laurels after two triumphant seasons.

In a league where the top clubs are technically all as good as each other, one single factor makes the difference: Hunger," he declared.

cricket organisers must recognise that if Bangladesh cricket has gone one step forward others have probably advanced by two steps. Television coverage of international cricket has been popularised, the game tremendously and we find countries like Japan have taken to cricket. The competition in the ACC tournament will be severe and in the ICC Associate Members Tournament ferocious.

Against this backdrop, I fail to understand the dire necessity of executing the punishments imposed by BCCB on Enamul Huq Moni, Farooq Ahmed, Athar Ali Khan and Minhajul Abedin Nannu for their wrongdoings in connection with the tour of Bangladesh team to USA and Canada. Not for a moment am I suggesting that their discipline be condoned—but from the quantum of the punishment it is obvious that it is merely a token one. If that be so and in view of the fact that these four cricketers constitute the very backbone of our cricket team would it not have been wiser either to suspend the sentence or to impose a monetary fine for their escapades. Seeing the predicament of our cricket I am sure there would have been a rush of volunteers to settle the penalty. Can we therefore ponder for a moment to reflect whether we have punished the cricketers or Bangladeshi cricket!

We are all encouraged by the appointment of Saber Hussain Chowdhury as president of the Bangladesh Cricket Control Board (BCCB). We have high expectations from this young dynamic successful businessman MP and we are optimistic that he will lead Bangladesh cricket to new heights in the international cricket arena. He has chosen a good and experienced committee and his concept of a full-time chief executive of BCCB is praiseworthy. He has rightly duplicated a world-wide phenomenon in the sporting world.

A few days back the national cricket team departed for Kuala Lumpur to participate in the ACC tournament. This is a very significant tournament as the winner will participate in the Asia Cup. It has been a long cherished dream of all cricket lovers of Bangladesh to see Bangladesh playing in the World Cup. A victory in the ACC tournament would be a great morale booster for our team that will participate in the ICC Associate Members tournament in the same venue early next year. The top three teams (if the same format is followed again) will play in the next World Cup. The ACC Tournament is not likely to be a cake walk for the Bangladesh team. We have to encounter with teams like UAE, Papua New Guinea, Fiji and hosts Malaysia. I feel that our

Dmitri's dazzling debut

LONDON, Sept 5: Dmitri Mascarenhas, an English-born Australian of Sri Lankan parentage, earned himself a place in Hampshire's record-books with an outstanding bowling display on his first-class debut on Wednesday, reports Reuter.

Teenager Mascarenhas took six for 88 against Glamorgan at Southampton, the best figures by a Hampshire player on his debut this century, as well as having three catches dropped of his bowling.

He could not prevent the Welsh side reaching 401 all out, but Hampshire made an encouraging reply and were 193 for two at the close.

At the top of the table, Leicestershire had the most productive day among the title challengers as the headed towards a sizeable first innings lead against Nottinghamshire.

Vince Wells and skipper James Whitaker both scored centuries to steer their side to 341 for five, a lead of 17 with five wickets in hand after two days.

Second placed, Derbyshire piled up 524, their biggest score against Somerset, but were then helped up by opener Mark Latham who made a flawless 109 off 149 balls including 20 fours.

At the close Somerset were 238 for four, still needing 137 to avoid the follow on.

Essex were also made to struggle harder than expected after reducing Warwickshire to 14 for four at Edgbaston.

Left-hander Wasim Khan contributed his third century of the season as the defending champions recovered to 253 all out at close.

Lancashire, needing just 130 for victory over Middlesex on a sub-standard pitch at Old Trafford, were rocked by former England spinner Phil Tufnell in the closing overs.

Tufnell dismissed Jason Gallian and John Crawley for ducks, taking his tally of wickets for the match to eight and leaving Lancashire to resume in the morning on two for three.
