'Country's judicial system needs comprehensive reforms'

State Minister for Law, Justice and Parliamentary Affairs Abdul Matin Khasru has said an overall and comprehensive reform of the country's judicial system is needed to meet the demand of the age, reports UNB.

"Though some of our laws are adequate to meet the demand of the present democratic atmosphere, most of them are suffering from inadequacy," he said while addressing the certificate awarding ceremony of the Continued Legal Education Programme (CLEP-12) at Bar Council in the city yesterday, reports UNB.

The Council has introduced the CLEP programme to impart training to young and new entrants to the legal profession, said a PID handout.

The present government has undertaken judicial reform programme and established law commission in this regard, the State Minister said.

He said law, lawyers, judges and judicial infrastructure are the four vital components of the judicial system, essential to ensuring justice.
