Opinion polls

Clinton leading over Bob Dole

The incumbent US President, Bill Clinton (Democrat), is leading over his Republican rival Bob Dole, according to latest opinion polls on the US election due today, reports UNB.

"But the gap is narrowing," said Donald M Bishop, the Director of US Information Service in Dhaka, yesterday quoting some opinion polls conducted by CNN, ABC, Reuters and Hotline.

Bishop told a press briefing at the Jatiya Press Club in the afternoon that turnout in the Tuesday's election might be lower as per predictions of the pollsters. The turnout was 55 per cent in the last US election, he said.

Some 60 per cent voters are registered with political parties while the rest 40 per cent are undecided voters, who always play a crucial role in the poll results, the USIS official said.

He explained the total process of the US presidential election, including popularity contest, primary elections, party convention, campaign and the voting under electoral college system.
