3 June, 1947 Plan by which Pakistan came to be established on 14 August, 1947. To many it seemed that Jinnah is pleading something which would tantamount to tearing the Hindu cow's partitioning or division of the country. Dispelling all such false arguments Jinnah made it clear in his presidential address that "the Mussalmans are a nation by any definition" and they occupy large parts of the country - "such as Bengal, Punjab, NWFP, Sind and Baluchistan". People of these areas not only have their separate cultures but they derive inspiration from a source of history which was different from that of the Hindus. Elaborating it further in the world context Jinnah argued:

"History has presented to us

many examples, such as the Union of Great Britain and Ireland, of Czechoslovakia and Poland. History has also shown to us many geographical tracts, much smaller than the subcontinent of India, which otherwise might have been called one country, but which have been divided into as many states as there are nations inhabiting them. The Balkan Peninsula comprises as many as seven or eight sovereign States. Likewise, the Portuguese and the Spanish stand divided in the Iberian Peninsula. Whereas under the pleas of the unity of India and one nation, which does not exist, it is sought to pursue here the line of one Central Government, when we know that the history of the last 12 hundred years has failed to achieve unity and has witnessed, during the ages, (that) India (was) always divided into Hindu India and Muslim India".
