Gillman grabs pole position

DUNAUJVAROS, May 25: Team John Player Gold Leaf drivers were on the pace from the opening qualifying session for vesterday's Hungarian Grand Prix for Formula One powerboats. Determined efforts from Jonathan Jones and Massimo Roggiero will see both red, white and gold boats start from top-six positions on the grid, says a press release.

Jones emerged second fastest from Saturday's two official qualifying sessions, a mere 0.6 secs behind pole position winner, Scott Gillman, of the United States. Roggiero was 1.1 secs behind Jones, in fifth place. A final "fast-six shootout" saw Jones retain his second-place grid position and reduce the gap to Gillman to 0.17

Reigning world champion, Guido Cappellini, was third fastest on 37.96 secs, while a lap of 38.44 secs from Roggiero saw the Italian annex fourth place. Rounding out the top six are Michael Werner (38.56 secs) and Pertti Lappala (38.83 secs). The competitiveness of the World Championship has clearly stopped up a gear from last season with Jones producing a lap more than 3.5 secs faster than his 1996 Hungarian Grand Prix qualifying performance and Gillman's time over 2 secs quicker than that recorded by last year's pole-winner, Fabrizio Bocca.

Scientists are just beginning to understand why rhythm has such powers. A spoonful of rhythm can be a potent medicine. To start, we live in a universe of rhythm, from the remember not to disturb the cycles of the planets and stars to the ebb and flow of the tides. We, too, are creatures of rhythm, each encoded with a unique rhythmicity, evident in our biology (heartbeat, breath, the regular pulsing of our cells) and in our gait and the pace of our gestures and speech. Oddly enough the rhythm we hear, the ones we make and those that
