LONDON, May 30 : Former England Test players Graham Gooch, John Emburey and Mike Gatting won official appointments for international tours next winter, reports AFP.

Emburey, a bowling coach and adviser on England's 1996-97 tour of Zimbabwe and New Zealand, will be the assistant coach to David Lloyd for the Sharjah Cup in December, followed by a five-Test series in the West Indies.

The tour manager both for the one-day four-team competition in the Middle East and the Test series in the Caribbean has yet to be announced.

England will contest the Sharjah Cup with India, Pakistan and the West Indies and will also play five one-day internationals against the hosts in the West Indies in a tour that begins on January 3 and ends on April 9.

Gooch was named England A squad manager for the tour of Kenya and Sri Lanka, beginning in late December and ending in early March.

The former England captain. who was originally to manage England A's tour to Australia last winter but had to stand down for personal reasons, will have former international colleague Gatting as coach on the three-month trip.

Kuerten defeated the fifthseeded Australian in five sets, 6-7 (3-7), 6-1, 6-3, 3-6, 6-4, to advance to the fourth round.

Muster was up 3-0 in the final set, but the Brazilian won six of the next seven games. The key break came in the ninth game when Kuerten hit a series of spectacular backhand winners to break Muster for 5-4. He then served out the match at Muster, who dominated clay court tennis in 1995 and 1996, had struggled in his first two rounds here. Also Friday, defending champion Steffi Graf overcame a shaky start to advance to the fourth round of with a 7-6 (7-4). 6-1 victory over Magui Serna of Spain. Graf, the No 2 seed, looked

But the 15th seed, Karina Habsudova of Slovakia, was her entire second-round match. In other action, the men's knocked out by Ruxandra > Dragomir of Romania, 6-3, 6-2. For the women, Thursday was the day of the dreaded double fault. For one young star, top-ranked Martina Hingis, it was a nervous double fault by an opponent that saved the day. And for one rising star who isn't quite there yet. Venus Williams, it was a whole bunch of double faults that ended a trip to Paris. Hingis, who had a close call in her second-round match against Italy's Gloria Pizzichini, acknowledged that if not for the key stumble by her opponent, things could have turned out a whole lot worse.

Pizzichini, the 75th-ranked player in the world, had won the first set and was a point away from 5-3 in the second when she double-faulted. What if she hadn't, Hingis was asked later.

the 16-year-old Swiss star said. As for her reaction to the double-fault: "Thank God." As often happens with a major stumble, it changed the momentum of the match. Hingis went on to win eight of the next nine games. Hingis was keenly aware of how intimidating it can be to face the top-ranked player across the net. In Williams' case, sloppy mistakes were the rule in her match against Nathalie Tauziat of France. Both players committed 51 unforced errors. But here too, the difference was in double faults. Williams
