Indiscriminate catching of Jatka affects Hilsa production

From Shirin Akhter

CHANDPUR, June 20: Hilsa fish popularly known as "Rupai fish" is our national asset. About 30 per cent of our total fish consumption are met by Hilsa. It is one of the major foreign exchange earning items. For the cultivation and development of Hilsa, rivers of the following districts are identified. The districts are Chandpur, Sariatpur, Barisal, Laxmipur, Bhola, Chittagong, Pirojpur, Barguna, Noakhali, Patuakhali and Khulna. The government can earn about Tk 1500 crore annually by exporting Hilsa fish alone. Most of the Hilsa fishes are exported from Barisal, Chandpur and Chittagong.

This fish is very fastswimming one. It can run 70-km in a day. The fishes are available both in the sea and rivers. The Hilsa fish is found in abundant in the rivers Padma, Jamuna, Meghna and other rivers. This kind of fish is also available in India and Myanmar. Seventy-five per cent of Hilsa fishes come from Bangladesh, 20 per cent from India and five per cent from Myanmar. The maximum quantity of Hilsa is obtained from the river Meghna near Chandpur.

Earlier, Hilsa was grown abundantly in the rivers like Tetulia near Barisal, the Padma near Goalondo and the Siba near Khulna. Out of the total catch of Hilsa about 90 per cent are procured from the rivers Padma, Meghna, Jamuna and the rest 10 per cent from the Bay of Bengal. At present the trend has changed. About 60 per cent of Hilsa are obtained from the Bay of Bengal.

Many factors are responsible for the present decline of Hilsa in the rivers. The construction of Farakka Barrage by India over the river Ganges is the major cause of decline of Hilsa fishes in Bangladesh. The environmental changes and gradual siltation of rivers have reduced the natural flow of water in the river Padma, Meghna and other rivers. As a result, the spawning ground of the Hilsa has decreased. The construction of embankments and irrigation projects has also kept negative impact on the normal flow of the rivers. Over-fishing in the rivers is one of the major reasons of decline of the Hilsa fishes. Introduction of highly developed fishing technology and modern mechanisation of catching Hilsa have increased. Due to siltation of the rivers, the migration of Hilsa fish from sea water to fresh water is decreasing day by day. Indiscriminate fishing of Jatka in the rivers throughout the year is also reducing the Hilsa production of the country. It is now difficult to locate its exact spawning ground. Though it lives in the sea, the fish leaves its egg in the estuary and in the rivers. The fertilised eggs of Hilsas are shifted from one place to another by the current of rivers.

The fish does not release all its eggs at a time. The majority of Hilsa fishes are caught at the time of breeding season in our country. As a result, Hilsa production is decreasing gradually. The following places have been identified as the main spawning and nursery grounds of Hilsa.

During the winter, the flow of water in the river is reduced. So the production is hampered. During the full monsoon plenty of Hilsa fishes are caught in the areas of Aricha, Goalondo, Godabari, Munshiganj, Louhacaught in a year. If 30 per cent of the Jatkas could be protected annually, an additional production of Hilsa worth Tk 500 crore to 750 crore could be attained, experts say.

For the cultivation and development of Hilsa, rivers of the following districts are identified. The districts are Chandpur, Sariatpur, Barisal, Laxmipur, Bhola, Chittagong, Pirojpur, Barguna, Noakhali, Patuakhali and Khulna. jang in the river Padma. The Hilsa is grown abundantly in the river Meghna from Chandpur to Shahtail in the north and Chandpur to Haimchar in the south.

According to Chandpur Fisheries Research Institute, about 4,000 metric tons of Jatkas are caught annually in these areas. So through catching Jatkas abundantly our fish resources are affected very badly.

Hatia, Sandwip and Mompura of the Meghna region are also well-known for spawning ground of Hilsa. It has been observed that Hilsa in flocks migrate to these areas from the Bay of Bengal for spawning during the tide of the river.

The induced spawning of Hilsa has been successful at Chandpur Fisheries Research Institute. So Hilsa fishes are now cultured and nursed in the ponds of the institute. In future Hilsa fish can be cultivated in ponds on commercial basis, it is presumed.
