50 Years of Independence

It is fifty years since the British pulled out of India, and BBC World will be making this anniversary with fifty special reports. This series, intended to be chronological, will mark many of the significant and memorable events since August 15th, 1947. Material from the vast film archives of the BBC will be complimented with unique footage from Asian News International, the New Delhi-based news agency. ANI was founded by Prem Prakash, who as one of India's leading cameramen shot many of the key events in the subcontinent over the past five decades. Mark Tully the former BBC South-Asia correspondent will present the fifty reports which will run from the end of June. This novel and original series will be made with an international audience in mind, and aims to give this year's anniversary a historical perspective by looking at the origins of some of the problems the subcontinent still faces. 2:25am, 2:25pm, 10:25pm every day.
