

Lewis lambasts chiefs

ZURICH, Aug 12: Carl Lewis on Monday attacked athletics chiefs for softening their penalties on drug cheats and warned that the sport was heading in the wrong direction.

Lewis said track and field's governing body, the International Amateur Athletic Federation (IAAF), had picked the wrong time to cut its bans for serious drugs like steroids from four to two years because of legal problems.

"At a time when everybody thinks the sport is truly... what's the message?" the nine-time Olympic champion said before Wednesday's Zurich meeting.

"They (the cheats) know that they can come back before the next (Olympic) Games (after a two-year ban). I am not comfortable with the direction of track and field."

The IAAF voted to abandon four-year bans just before this month's World Championships in Athens because they were widely regarded as being too harsh under restraint of trade legislation and athletes could go to court and win.

The move has been attacked by some top athletes including Britain's former Olympic 100 metres champion Linford Christie.

The Athens championships showed that some athletes are still trying to cheat their way to glory. Five tested positive for banned drugs at the event, including two medalists.

The 36-year-old Lewis, the most successful and popular figure in the sport, said he does not plan to take on an official role in US athletics when he retires from racing next month.

"They are not addressing the drug problem properly. They are not promoting the sport properly," Lewis said. "I am going to be doing things for young people but not under the auspices of the IAAF or USA track and field (the national federation)."

But he added: "I have had a great time, made a lot of money and retired with an Olympic medal... I love the sport."

Lewis plans to be involved in projects to encourage children to take up physical exercise after he runs his final race on September 13 in Houston where he went to university.

But first there is the most lucrative meeting of the athletics season in Zurich to contend with.

The reigning Olympic long jump champion and his manager Joe Douglas have often been at odds with the US National federation over the years because they feel the sport has not been run properly in the country.

Despite the success of athletes like Lewis and double Olympic champion Michael Johnson and the enthusiastic crowds at last year's Atlanta Olympics, track and field is struggling to compete with other sports in the US.

It does not enjoy the same popularity as it does in Europe and there are no US meetings close to matching the big money of the Zurich Weltklasse where a world record is worth 50,000 dollars and major athletes can earn around 80,000 dollars just for turning up.

Lewis is running the 100 metres in Zurich but is not due to compete against the likes of newly-crowned world champion Maurice Greene and Canada's Olympic champion Donovan Bailey.

Organisers said they expected the Canadian to run despite the sprain muscle in the sprint relay in Athens on Sunday.

Lewis, a former 100 metres world record holder who effectively gave up top-class athletics after his long jump triumph in Atlanta, said he did not mind missing out on the big races.

"Been there, done that," he said. "I am looking forward to retiring and the next phase of my life. I am ready to retire."

Lewis is leaving the sport at the same time as Christie who announced at the weekend that he was finally quitting after several false starts in recent times.

"I hope he is happy with the decision," Lewis said. "He was one of my fiercest competitors and I have a lot of respect for him."

Pele calls Joao a dictator

RIO DE JANEIRO, Aug 12: Pele escalated his feud with Joao Havelange, calling soccer's top official a "dictator" for threatening to bar defending champions Brazil from the 1998 World Cup, reports AP.

The president of FIFA, soccer's ruling body, says he will exclude Brazil from the sport's showcase event if Congress approves Pele's proposal for restructuring Brazilian soccer.

"It was the reaction of a dictator, precipitated and arrogant," Pele said in the current issue of the magazine Veja.

The soccer great is now Brazil's minister of sports. Last week he proposed a bill that would eventually eliminate the reserve clause that ties players to clubs. It also would allow referees to unionise and make sports tribunals independent.

The Brazilian Soccer Confederation — run by Havelange's son-in-law, Ricardo Teixeira — would lose much of its power and would have to open its books on international transfers of players.

Pele says his proposal will help root out corruption in Brazilian soccer. But Havelange, who is Brazilian, says FIFA statutes do not allow independent referees or tribunals.

Behind the confrontation is a struggle for influence between soccer's greatest player and the sport's top official, now in the twilight of his career.

"The hypothesis of France holding the Cup without Brazil doesn't exist," Pele said. "Havelange is president of FIFA, but he is no longer has the power he thinks he has."

Pele, who retired as a player in 1977, says he is in agreement in this instance with Argentine star Diego Maradona — another critic of Havelange.

"A few years ago Maradona told me that Havelange was gaga," Pele said. "I defended him and even fought with Maradona. But now, I think he really is gaga. I feel sorry for him."

Australians Grant Hackett (L) and Ian Thorpe celebrate after the two finished first and second respectively in the men's 400m freestyle at the Pan-Pacific Championships in Fukuoka, Japan yesterday.

Talbot counts on 'Thorpedo'

FUKUOKA, Japan, Aug 12 (Reuters): Australia's swimming machine has taken on some new blood, including a 14-year-old nicknamed "Thorpedo", as it eyes its goal of the Sydney Summer Olympics in 2000.

"It's part of the process," head Australian coach Don Talbot said at the Pan-Pacific Championships. "We are identifying young people for 2000."

Talbot, who brought seven coaches with him to help oversee the 34 swimmers, including 17 teenagers, has competing in Fukuoka, said the Australian government is spending more money to support sports programmes in the run-up to the Sydney Olympics.

"They are very keen to make a good showing to the world," he said.

The 14-year-old is Ian Thorpe, whose destruction of age-group records in Australia has earned him the "Thorpedo" title from the Australian media.

He is also the youngest male to ever make an Australian team, beating by one month Australian hero John Konrads, who made Australia's 1956 Olympic team at 14 years, six months. Konrads went on to win an Olympic gold medal in 1960 and set half a dozen world records.

Thorpe has swam the 400 metre freestyle in three minutes 53.44 seconds, which would have given him eighth spot in the finals at the Atlanta Olympics.

"It's pretty exciting," Thorpe's coach Doug Frost said, adding Thorpe was looking forward to the Olympics in his hometown of Sydney. "He's looking at that. That is where his goals are," Frost said.

Thorpe is just the youngest of several rising stars the Australians are developing for 2000. Frost also pointed to 16-year-old Simon Cowley, who is quickly gaining on veteran Philip Rogers, 25, as Australia's best breaststroker.

"He's an outstanding prospect as well as far as Sydney is concerned," Frost said.

Grant Hackett, a relative veteran at 17, is already ranked number one in the world in both the 800 and 1,500 freestyle and took the gold in the 1,500 at the World Short-Course Championships in Sweden in April.

The old man of the youth brigade, by Australian standards, is Michael Klim, who turns 20 on Wednesday. Klim has been giving himself early birthday presents this week. On Sunday, he had the fastest time in the world in the last two years in winning the 200 freestyle.

His time of 1:47.60 was 0.03 second better than the gold medal time at last year's Olympics. He followed that up on Monday by swimming the 100 freestyle in 49.46. The fastest time in the world this year and an Australian and Commonwealth record.

The Australian women's team is also stocking up on youth for the Olympics, including 15-year-olds Kristy Ellem and Natasha Bowron, who both won short-course gold medals.

Bowron, who did not come to Fukuoka because she was sick, led the 800 freestyle from start to finish in Sweden. Ellem won the 200 breaststroke in 2:22.68 to become the third-fastest swimmer in the event ever.

The Pan-Pacific meeting ends on Wednesday and is one of the last important events on the swimming calendar prior to next January's World Championships.

Kipketer aiming above Coe

ZURICH, Aug 12: Denmark's former Kenyan Wilson Kipketer will try to erase the oldest and most prestigious world record from the books on Wednesday and, with it, the name of one of the greatest middle-distance runners ever — Britain's Sebastian Coe, reports Reuter.

After equalling Coe's world record of one minute 41.73 seconds for the 800 metres in Stockholm earlier in the season, the double world champion will run in the most lucrative Grand Prix meeting in Athletics looking to make history and more than 130,000 dollars.

Last week Kipketer made the defence of his world 800 title in Athens in 1:43.38 look easy. With the help of pacemakers and a mild warm night in the Swiss city, the 26-year-old should be in a good position to take the record into new territory.

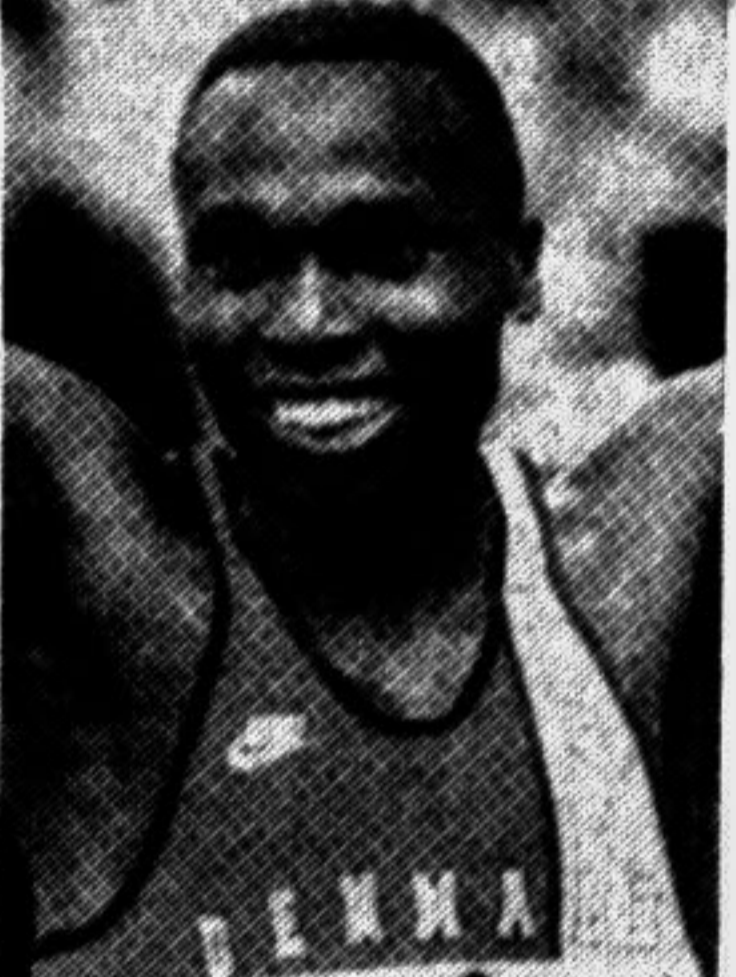

Kipketer was just a 10-year-old growing up in Kenya when Coe breezed around a track in Florence to set the world record in June 1981 with one of the most astonishing middle-distance performances of all time.

Twice last season Kipketer, who went to live in Denmark in 1990, neared the record after missing the Atlanta Olympics because he was not cleared to run for his adopted country.

There is a feeling in the athletics world — shared by Coe — that it is only a matter of time before he betters Coe's mark. From his bank manager's point of view, there is no better place to produce a world record than at the Weltklasse meeting.

Organisers of the Zurich event are reluctant to announce world record attempts in advance. But the financial incentive is always there.

A world record is worth 50,000 dollars in cash plus one kilo of gold. Kipketer could expect to earn a fee of at least 80,000 dollars for just stepping out on to the track. In addition, his show sponsors would be expected to give him a huge bonus for breaking new ground in the sport.

Some 25 champions, 22 silver and 20 bronze medalists from the Athens Championships are scheduled to compete in a meeting which is known on the circuit as the "the Olympics in one night."

Donovan Bailey's 100 metres world record of 9.84 seconds could also be in danger when the Canadian takes on the newly-crowned world champion Marice Greene in a sprint field containing seven of the eight finalists from Athens.

Bailey is hoping to compete despite hurting a groin muscle when he anchored Canada to their sprint relay triumph at the weekend.

American women's sprint champion Marion Jones will also take on a high-class field over 100 metres which includes former world champions Gwen Torrence and Gail Devers.

Britain's Roger Black, not selected for the individual 400 metres in Athens amid controversy at home, has a chance for a shot at world and Olympic champion Michael Johnson.

The Zurich crowd can expect a fascinating battle in the 5,000 metres between Kenya's world champion Daniel Komen and Ethiopia's Haile Gebrselassie of Ethiopia who set the world record of 12:44.39 on the same track two years ago.

Komen said on Monday the race was too soon after his triumph in Athens on Sunday for a world record. But if conditions are good, Zurich regulars know that athletics history can be made at any moment.

Friendly soccer

ZURICH, Switzerland, Aug 12: Eight German based players were named today in a FIFA World XI to face the Russian All-Stars in a match in Moscow on August 18 to mark the centenary of Russian football and the 850th anniversary of the city of Moscow, reports AFP.

German internationals Lothar Matthaeus and Stefan Effenberg are joined by goalkeeper Uwe Gospendarek, Dutch defender Frank Verlaak, midfielders Abedi Pele of Ghana and Piotr Nowak of Poland, Brazilian striker Giovanni Elber and Polish attacker Andrei Joskowak, all Bundesliga stars, in a 17-man squad to be jointly coached by Englishman Bobby Robson and Mexican national team coach Bora Milutinovic.

Ramon Vega, Tottenham's Swiss defender, is the only English-based player named, while Frenchman Youri Djorkaeff, Butchman Aaron Winter and veteran striker Robert Baggio will represent Italy's Serie A.

BAF handball results

JESSORE, Aug 12: Three more matches of the Bangladesh Air Force Inter-base handball championship were finished at the BAF Base Matruh Rahman here today.

BAF Base Bashur defeated Air Headquarters Unit 15-8 and the hosts beat BAF Base Zahurul Haque 21-12.

Meanwhile, BAF Base Bashur team outplayed BAF Base Pahar Kanchanpur by 13-11 goals yesterday.

Lama looks to sign for Real

PARIS, Aug 12: Paris St Germain's French international goalkeeper Bernard Lama is due in Madrid this week to try and reach an agreement with Real Madrid, sources close to the player said on Monday, reports Reuter.

Lama has another year to run on his contract with PSG but the Parisian club have agreed to his move abroad and have played Christophe Revault, signed from Le Havre in the off-season, in goal.

While PSG are away in Bucharest for their European Cup preliminary round first leg against Steaua, Lama hopes to meet with Real president Lorenzo Sanz and make a deal before the August 15 deadline for Champions' League registrations.

The sources said PSG and Real have already settled on a transfer fee of around eight million francs (12 million dollars) for the 33-year-old goalkeeper whom coach Jupp Heynckes is keen to have in his squad.

Liverpool turn back on Barnes

LIVERPOOL, Aug 12: Former England midfielder John Barnes has been told he can leave Liverpool on a free transfer after 10 years at the club, reports Reuter.

Barnes, 33, asked for the free transfer after spending Liverpool's first match of the season, a 1-1 draw with Wimbledon on Saturday, on the subs bench.

He is believed to feel the arrival of three new midfield players — Paul Ince, Oyvind Leonhardsen and Danny Murphy — which has indicated a doubtful future for him as a starter on the team.

"We made it quite clear to John that we feel he has been an excellent servant to club and can stay if he wants, but that if he feels it is beneficial to him, he can go on free transfer," a club spokesman said on Monday.

Asked about Barnes's feelings regarding his future with Liverpool, the spokesman added: "You have only to look at the midfield that played on Saturday. He was on the bench but did not play."

New FCUA body

FARIDPUR, Aug 12: The executive committee of Faridpur Cricket Umpires Association (FCUA) has been formed on Friday, reports BSS.

According to the association source, an eleven-member committee was formed with Md. Mujibur Rahman, police super, as chairman, Aminur Rahman Farid as general secretary and S M A Hasnat as treasurer.

The committee was formed for a period of two years. The objective of the committee is to look into the welfare of the local umpires.
