Indiscriminate use of fertilisers declining soil fertility

From Ratan Chowdhury

SHERPUR, Aug 19: Indiscriminate use of chemical fertilisers and repeated cultivation of same crop on the same plot of land without interval are steadily declining soil fertility in five thanas of the district, according to a recent survey conducted by the Agricultural Extension Department and Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO).

Survey reports say that the cultivators having little knowledge about the soil component use fertilisers indiscriminately to get optimum production from the land. Thus fertility of soil is being destroyed completely. Most of the farmers ignore the rules of using chemical. Most of the cultivable lands in five thanas of the district produce the same crop for years together applying chemical fertilisers.

A total of 55 to 70 kg of chemical fertilisers including urea and Triple Super Phosphate (TSP) are used on 30 decimals of land, according to the survey report.

The survey team consisted of Dr K G Pillai, Chief Technical Adviser of FAO and M A Awal, Additional Director (Monitoring), Field Service Wing DAE, Khambhari, Dhaka.

They further said, farmers rarely use cowdung.

As a result, the production capacity of land is rapidly decreasing. The production capacity of soil is also being destroyed due to heavy iron content of under-ground water extracted by shallow and deep tubewells used for irrigation.

Siltation due to flash flood also damages soil fertility. As a result, boro paddy was affected by viscous (chila) this year.

Deputy Commissioner of Sherpur Md Naofel Mia told The Daily Star farmers should be guided about proper use of chemical fertilisers. They should be trained about use of fertiliser after proper testing of soil in consultation with the local agriculture officers and experts. The farmers should apply organic fertilisers to retain the production capacity, the DC suggested.

Md Wasiuzzaman Akand, Deputy Director, Agriculture Extension Department (AED) Sherpur in an interview with this correspondent on August 13 said, the field of paddy per bigha (30 decimals) was 28 to 30 maunds in the 70s decade in this belt.

From 1991 to 1996, the yield was only 14-18 maunds per bigha with the application of same quantity of chemical fertiliser. The decrease in production was due to decay of particular components of soil owing to indiscriminate use of chemical fertiliser. The Deputy Director of AED further said chemical fertiliser and low quality seeds are the main causes of the problem which affected boro paddy last season. He also said all emphasis should be given for balanced use of fertilisers. The farmers should be trained properly.

Md Fazlul Haq Mollah, Training Officer, DAE, Sherpur revealed 900 farmers were given training in the district. They were asked to use cowdung.
