Taylor's denial

SYDNEY, Sept 8: Australian cricket captain Mark Taylor rejected speculation that he was set to resign by reaffirming his desire to stay in charge on Monday, reports AP.

Taylor led Australia to a 3-2 Ashes win over England last month and believes his team is the best in world cricket following similar victories over South Africa and the West Indies.

Taylor is having a function in his honour in Sydney on Friday and many have taken that to mean he is close to retiring.

He returned home from England with an average of 31.70 with the bat in the six-Test series, including a century in the second Test with his career in the balance.

Taylor, 32, said he would use the lunch to confirm that he wants to keep playing.

"It think there's a lot of people who think I'm going to retire at that lunch, but I don't think I'll be doing anything silly like that," Taylor said.

"It's just a matter of saying I'm looking forward to keeping playing and hopefully they'll keep picking me."

The Australian Cricket Board recently announced a new selection policy of choosing two distinct teams for Test and one-day cricket, a move seen as putting further pressure on Taylor.

Taylor said having one captain for Test and one-day cricket was best for team harmony, but would accept being the Test skipper only.

"I'd be prepared to do it. I'm still very keen to play cricket for Australia and I'll play as many games as I can," Taylor said.

Taylor endured the worst form slump of any Australian batsman in Test history but kept his job because of his winning record as skipper.

Rafter after a decade

NEW YORK, Sept 8: Australian Patrick Rafter capped two weeks of sensational serve and volley tennis on Sunday by beating unseeded Briton Greg Rusedski to win the US Open title, reports Reuter.

The 13th-seeded Rafter, who had been to five finals this year without a victory, claimed his first major title with a hard fought 6-3, 6-2, 4-6, 7-5 victory over the biggest server in the game.

"I just can't believe it at the moment. I'm in a fantasy land," Rafter said after receiving the trophy and the 650,000 US dollars winner's check.

"It's something you never dream of. Well, you dream of it, but you never think it's going to happen," said the deliriously happy champion.

The 24-year-old wonder from Down Under, the first Australian to win a Grand Slam event since Pat Cash at Wimbledon in 1987, joins a legendary list of US Open champions from Australia but is the first since John Newcombe's 1973 win at Forest Hills.

Rusedski, who had lost in the first round of his three previous trips to the Open, was obviously pleased with his showing despite the disappointment of losing the biggest match of his life.

"I've had a good run but Pat played extremely well," said the big left hander.

"He had a great run and he deserved to win the tournament," added the Canadian-born Briton, who delivered the biggest serve ever recorded — a 143 mile per hour (230 kph) screaming service winner in the fourth set that left Rafter checking his racket to see if it was still intact.

"Pat was the bigger player today, he took the advantage on the big points and that's why he was the winner," said Rusedski, who earned 350,000 for his first appearance in a Grand Slam final.

Rafter, who played by far the best tennis of his life here, losing just two sets in seven matches, will see his ranking rise to third in the world as a result of his Open heroics.

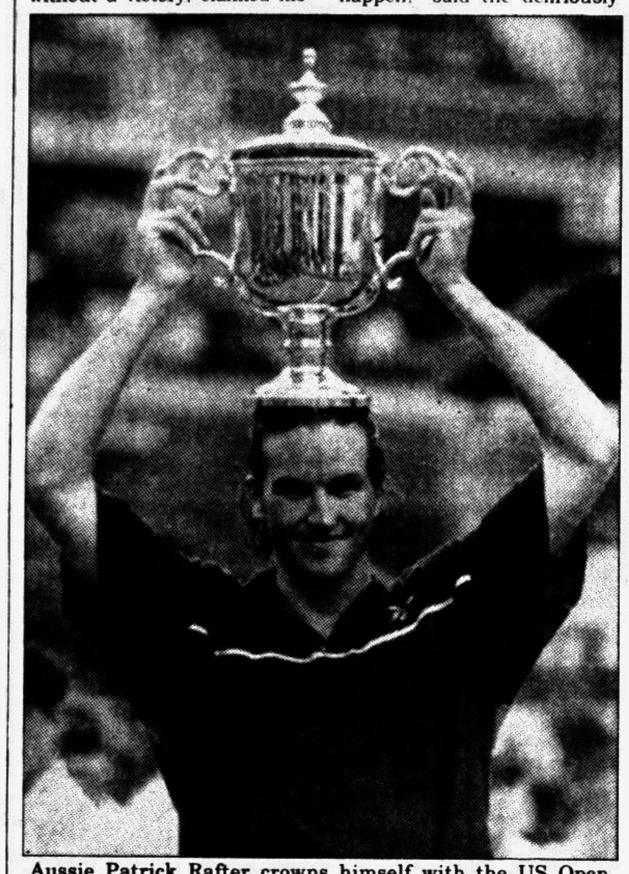
The matchup marked the first US Open final of the decade without an American competitor, thanks in no small part to Rafter, who took out Andre Agassi in the fourth round and second-seed Michael Chang in the semifinals.

He reached match point with an ace and followed it with a forehand crosscourt volley winner — just the kind of point that had gotten him to this momentous moment.

He then fell over on his back in disbelief before rising and climbing up into the stands to celebrate with his friends.

"I just wanted to just lie down and soak it up," he said of his immediate reaction.

"I just wanted to stay out there forever."



Aussie Patrick Rafter crowns himself with the US Open trophy after winning the final 6-3, 6-2, 4-6, 7-5 against Briton Greg Rusedski in Flushing Meadows on Sunday.

NatWest Trophy goes to Essex

LONDON, Sept 8: Essex laid the ghost of last season's humiliating defeat by Lancashire to crush Warwickshire and take the NatWest Trophy on Sunday in another disappointing one-sided limited-overs final, reports Reuter.

On a day when winning the toss was always going to be crucial, Paul Prichard's men were able to put Warwickshire in and hold their opponents to 170 for eight. Essex, 57 all out last year, reached the total for the loss of just one wicket and with 33 of their allotted 60 overs to spare.

The match had been postponed from Saturday because of the funeral of Princess Diana.

Warwickshire got off to a poor start, losing both openers in a fine spell from Ashley Cowan, who took advantage of some early moisture in the pitch to claim three for 29.

With the run-rate soon nagging at Warwickshire Paul Grayson was able to secure two run-outs, and only four batsmen were able to get over 20.

Prichard was well pleased with his side's performance in the field. "The bowlers used the conditions just as we had like."

"Last year was a big disappointment, this year was a big joy," he added.

Prichard and Stuart Law survived three early half-chances as Essex rattled 36 off the first four overs in their reply.

Prichard rifled his way to a fine 57 off only 45 balls before being trapped lbw by Allan Donald, but by then the game was virtually over, and when Nasser Hussain joined Law, he too set about the Warwickshire attack.

It was a sign of Essex's dominance that after 22 overs they were 144 for one, as compared to Warwickshire's miserable 42 for two at the same stage.

Law won the game with a boundary after a misfield. He ended the match on 80, scored off just 71 balls, an innings which won him the man-of-the-match award.

Kent go atop

LONDON, Sept 8: Kent went top of the Sunday league with an impressive nine-wicket win over Gloucestershire, reports Reuter.

With one game to go Kent moved to 50 points, two ahead of Warwickshire who were engaged in the NatWest Trophy final at Lord's, losing heavily to Essex.

In the deciding games next Sunday, Kent are away to Yorkshire while Warwickshire entertain Gloucestershire. Only Lancashire, third on 42 points and with two games to play, have any hope to denying the top two.

Kent cruised to victory at Canterbury, confining Gloucestershire to 136-9 and then knocking off the runs with more than 11 overs to spare thanks to half centuries by Trevor Award (54) and Ed Smith (54 not out).

BRIEF RESULTS

Results of English Sunday League (40 overs) cricket matches:

Hingis humbles Williams

From Tawfiq Aziz Khan

NEW YORK, Sept 8: She jumped into the air, threw her arms up, flung her racket into the stands, ran to the corner where her mother was, climbed the wall and kissed her — she lifted the third Grand Slam title this year missing the French by whisker.

Martina Hingis, the wonder girl of world tennis took barely 62 minutes to claim the last Grand Slam of the year outplaying her more powerful opponent Venus Williams in front of a capacity partisan crowd 6-0, 6-4.

In the end Williams agreed, "Martina played a little better than me and handled the situation better." Hingis, never afraid of the powerful serve and ground stroke of the tall American, played her usual game never serving above 90 miles an hour compared to 111-113 miles of Williams and at times she made it look like child's play having Williams at her mercy. She could only serve thrice and broken Williams thrice in the first set without any extra effort. It took her only 22 minutes to close the first set as both players were quite tentative at the initial stages.

Venus had her chances to come back into the game as she broke Hingis in the eighth game. But the little genius superbly turned the set into her favour as she broke Williams from a 0-30 down in the 9th and then she held her serve and finished off the match with a down the line forehand. Williams playing her first US Open received a cheque for $350,000 and the champion had a purse of $ 650,000.

Reuter adds: Hingis, who reached all four Grand Slam finals, became the youngest women's player to win at least three major singles titles in a single season, adding her name to the star-studded list of Margaret Court, Billie Jean King, Martina Navratilova, Steffi Graf and Monica Seles.

The only Grand Slam miss for the Swiss this season was at the French Open, where she came back from a six -week layoff following a horse riding accident to reach the final before losing to Croatian Iva Majoli.

"When I fell of the horse I was out for almost seven week," said Hingis, "I was a little shaky when I came back. I could have gone for the Grand Slam, but I'm going to have many more years ahead of me."

Hingis, who underwent arthroscopic surgery to repair a knee after the fall, gave away eight inches (20 cm) in height to the 6-foot-2 (1.88 m) Williams, but the sting was in her sizzling backhand and service returns and she had no trouble handling whatever the American had to offer.

Venus has a lot to learn

NEW YORK, Sept 8 (AP): A missed chance here, a double fault there. An overshot in an open court, an easy return hit into the net.

They added up to 38 unforced errors Sunday, far too many for Venus Williams to have any real chance against Martina Hingis in the US Open championship match.

Williams had sailed through six opponents in two weeks, always overcoming the mistakes you'd expect from a 17-year-old playing just the third Grand Slam tournament of her career. Against Hingis, she couldn't get away with it.

"I wasn't surprised," Williams said. "One of my only weaknesses is I will start hitting unforced errors. I'm just going to have to keep working hard. Maybe in the future, six months from now, that will be something that will pass."

For two weeks, Williams had juggled questions about her race, about the heritage of Arthur Ashe, whose name is on the stadium where the Open was played, and Althea Gibson, the first African-American to win this title 40 years ago.

"If someone wants to play the sport, they shouldn't be put out because of their race or religion or social status," she said. "That really is part of the American belief. It really should be part of the world's belief."

Her father said the ugly bumping incident with Irina Spirlea in the semifinals was racially motivated and that his daughter had been a target of racism on the Tour. Throughout it all, Williams maintained her cool, dismissing all that talk.

"I don't think that's even part of it right now," she said.

None of that mattered against Hingis. What did, however, was the sea of errors that doomed her chances.

The match had started so well. Williams won three of the first four points on her serve. The only unforced error had been committed by Hingis on the first point of the game. And then, trouble.

Leading 40-15, Williams committed four straight unforced errors and in no time, Hingis had the first game break. How important was that for the No. 66 ranked player in the world facing the No 1 player?

"It was a turning point of the match," Williams said. "I think that I just thought I had to do too much, maybe I wanted to end the points a little bit quicker. Sometimes, I'll tend to play like that."

"No, I didn't expect to have this opponent in the finals"

NEW YORK, Sept 8: Following is the official text of Martina Hingis' post-final interview at the US Open in Flushing Meadows on Sunday, sent by Our Special Correspondent.

Q. Was it easier than you expected?

MARTINA HINGIS: Well, I didn't think it was very easy. I just played, you know, very good tennis out there, especially in the first set.

You know, she had a great performance in the matches before, especially that one against Irina, coming back from being two match points down. That was a great effort from her.

I thought, "Well, maybe she might be a little bit tired." But she was still running very well at the baseline. Just played outstanding tennis out there.

Q. Martina, going in, what was your plan against her?

MARTINA HINGIS: Well, you just kind of have to try to mix it up a lot. You can't allow her to make her game. She has very powerful groundstrokes. If she's going to let you run left-right all the time, especially her backhand is very dangerous.

Q. Nobody handles her serve as well as you did in this tournament. What do you know about her serve that helps you?

MARTINA HINGIS: Well, I'm pretty much known about having a great return. I'm pretty much known that I'm having a good return. So my serve is not a big weapon I have in my game. I have to have something else. That's my return.

I also think mostly she's trying to serve to my forehand. I just know the ball, if it's going to be important, she's going try to serve there.

You know, she maybe didn't serve as hard as against the other players. Just was trying to keep the ball in the game. You know, I always had the chance to play it back.

Q. Did you have any concern when she broke you in the second set?

MARTINA HINGIS: Well, it was the only break — the only time she broke me. I was like, "Okay, that's the same thing as when I played Lindsay Davenport, having the set 6-2, 4-2, then loosening up a little bit." I was also maybe a little bit tired from, you know, just everything what was around, being in the Finals against Venus Williams. I thought, "Well, I've got it now."

She started actually playing much better in the end.

Q. Martina, two weeks ago everybody would frankly have expected you to be in the final but probably not Venus Williams. Was that tougher on you also because you probably didn't expect her to be here either?

MARTINA HINGIS: No, I didn't expect to have this opponent in the Finals.

I think many people, just spectators, were following this match. I think it's great for women's tennis. You always see new faces.

There were always people talking about her, but she never brought up the results. Now this time, making first time a performance at the US Open, reaching the Finals, is not a bad effort at all. It's pretty good.

Q. Martina, after such a wonderful year you've had this year, how do you look at next year? Can you possibly top it? You've only had two losses the whole year.

MARTINA HINGIS: Well, you know, I'm very happy about my whole tennis game at all, I just had a great year. You know, what can I improve? Sometimes I ask myself. It's a little scary. I haven't won the French Open, so that's kind of my goal. That's the tournament I want to win the most, and I haven't won that. I think I'm going to have many more years in front of me to, you know, maybe win it one time.

Q. Were you careful at the changeovers not to bump into her?

MARTINA HINGIS: Well, I was watching (laughter). I was like, you know, either I was faster than her. I was watching (laughter).

But she, too, she was like not making the same mistake. But it was funny.

Q. Martina, after Wimbledon, Chris Evert said in a way the one sad thing about you becoming No. 1 was that you inherited slightly be default because Steffi Graf was absent. Were you disappointed that Steffi wasn't here for this tournament, and do you think it would have been any different had she been here?

MARTINA HINGIS: You always kind of talking about Steffi Graf. It's not my mistake she's not playing here.

You know, whenever she's going to come back, maybe for the Championships, she's for sure going to be always a dangerous player. You know her name, she's got so many Grand Slam titles. She had such a big career. Whenever she's going to come back, she's going to be a tough player to beat.

But having Williams on the other side is not, you know the easiest thing in the world to do either. So I think you don't always have to talk about the past, but about the future, new generation like Venus Williams, Kournikova, and Lucic. Also Lindsay Davenport and Monica Seles are nothing to forget about, too.

Q. Martina, for the record, what's the name of the horse that perhaps kept you from getting a Grand Slam Championship?

MARTINA HINGIS: It was just Tina. Tina was her name. It wasn't my horse. I'm not riding her anymore.

Q. Whose horse was it?

MARTINA HINGIS: Just a friend's horse.

Q. But I mean at one point at 5-Love, you swatted at a ball that was clearly long. You were obviously having fun out there. Was it not enough of a challenge at the beginning?

MARTINA HINGIS: She made a lot of mistakes. I think she was pretty nervous, you know, being in the Finals. So was I. I just was kind of trying to hit the ball back, let her make something out there.

I just played very good tennis.
