Majher Char: Landless people yet to get allocation of khas lands

PIROJPUR, Oct 7: It was a glimmering hope for the landless farmers of the district when Majher Char, a tiny island in the river Boleswar, started emerging 40 years back. But their dreams never come true, reports UNB.

When the char emerged on about 1200-acre area, the subsequent governments had promised to distribute the khas lands among the landless people, but they failed to follow their commitments in action.

According to a local census, some 1200 people are now living in the Majher Char, some 13 kilometres Southeast off thana Sadar. Poor people from adjoining Bhandaria, Shwarankhola and Bogi areas started settling there since 30 years back.

Of the total land, about 450 acres are arable. Dwelling houses were made on 220 acres while some 500 acres have been preserved for afforestation. The local forest office acquired more lands last year for the Green Belt Project.

"The genuine landless people were supposed to get allocation of the khas lands, but they are being deprived of their rights because of joddars who often resort to terrorism and capture croplands during harvest," said a farmer.

Majority of the population earn their livelihood by fishing, cultivating lands and taming cows and buffaloes in the char that still lacks basic amenities like medicare facilities.

There is a registered non-government school without logistic support. A cyclone-shelter centre was set up several years ago, but it has no adequate space.

More worrying is that the char has no adequate number of tubewells to ensure safe water for the inhabitants. A handful of tubewells, which the char now possesses, remain out of order most of the time.

A total of 1,02,759 acres were inundated in five districts of Barisal division of which 11,380 acres might have been damaged either partially or totally, the sources added.

Agriculture experts said, the affected lands would, however, be saved from the attack of papari insects as well as from that of tuga viruses due to this inundation.

The crops and trees which were damaged by the cyclone included aman crop and betel-leaf garden, banana and timber and fruit-bearing trees.

Besides, a total of 135 primary schools were damaged totally and 233 partially in Bhola district and 38 primary schools totally in Barguna district and 61 partially in this district. Education Office sources said.

On the other hand, Deputy Director of Secondary Schools told that a total of 200 high schools were damaged either totally or partially in Bhola district by this natural havoc.

Over six lakh people took shelter in 1,275 cyclone shelters in 35 thanas of 16 off-shore districts of the country during the last cyclone sweeping the southern parts of the districts at a speed of 130 to 150 km per hour. Red Crescent office sources said.
