Ministers chase cybercriminals

Aspiring models take lessons ahead of their expected maiden appearance tomorrow at a grand show planned by Anamika, a modeling and advertising firm.

WASHINGTON, Dec 10: Justice and Interior ministers from the world's leading industrial countries gathered here Tuesday to strike a joint blow against crime in cyberspace, reports AFP.

The officials from the Group of Eight (G8) industrialised nations on Wednesday were scheduled to explore the transnational nature of computerised crime and how criminals are able to exploit the Internet's legal vacuum.

At its worst, Internet crime can even threaten democracies, experts say.

According to US Attorney General Janet Reno, the officials will debate "ways in which our countries can work together to better identify and locate cybercriminals."

She added: "The fight against lawlessness on the Internet will be one of the greatest law enforcement challenges of the next century. By working on agreements to help meet that challenge, we won't be left fighting 21st century threats with 20th century solutions."
