Ever changing colour of a defaulting borrower

By Toufique Imrose Khalidi

Fazlur Rahman sat on the boards of three major state-controlled commercial banks. So he had no problems in getting bank loans. Whether he repaid them is another matter.

Today, he owes tens of crores to Bangladesh's banking system, according to central bank inspectors. It's more than a billion taka, even by most conservative estimates.

General Ershad placed him on the Sonali Bank board. Then, under Khaleda Zia, he went a step further, finding himself on the Janata and Rupali boards of directors.

A master manipulator, Fazlur Rahman of Narayanganj knows how to do it. Ask any top banker in the past 10-15 years. They will tell you he is a generous gift-giver.

Several bank chief executives have confirmed that his gifts were indeed tempting. Many of them, and some others in the non-banking community, have said they refused him.

Ask anybody in Narayanganj. They will identify him as chiri Fazlur.

He is indeed sweeter than sugar. A well-known university professor was so impressed by him that he agreed to take him to the managing director of a bank who had been refusing to see him for long.

The professor later discovered to his embarrassment that he had been befuddled by a sweet-talking defaulting borrower.

These days, banking and business sources say, he enjoys the blessings of at least one mighty minister and a powerful businessman close to the ruling party who would be ready to do him a favour.

In fact, he is one of those favoured few, never having problems in finding their way out. He cites his being part of the prime ministerial entourage on her trips abroad as a testimony to his credibility and importance as a businessman. In October 1996, he was with the prime minister visiting the United States.

Starting as a small-scale importer, he has been able to put himself at the helm of the several-hundred-crore-taka Rahman Group.

Sitting in his plush Sena Kalyan Building office, its walls decorated with his photographs with foreign dignitaries, a polite and soft-spoken Fazlur Rahman exudes confidence, citing so many of his achievements that give him the sense of being important and right.

Gram Adalats may start functioning from March

Star Report

Courts called Gram Adalats are likely to start functioning from March this year for inexpensive and quick dispensation of justice at the grass-roots level, according to official sources.

Persons having high moral standard and willingness to give time as 'honorary adjudicators' on voluntary basis will man these courts in all the thanas across the country, the sources said.

A draft bill titled 'Gram Adalat Bill, 1998' has been finalised. A copy of the draft bill was handed over to Abdul Matin Khasru, Minister for Law, Justice and Parliamentary Affairs yesterday. Talking to The Daily Star yesterday the law minister hoped that with the installation of Gram Adalats, at least 70 per cent of the cases now coming to higher courts, could be disposed of at grassroots levels.

The draft was prepared by an expert group comprising Justice KM Sobhan, Advocate Ahmed Ali and Dr Mizanur Rahman, Professor of Law Faculty of Dhaka University.

One of the members of the expert group told The Daily Star yesterday, 'Before preparing the draft bill a survey was carried out at grass-roots level in 54 unions of the country on people's perception of the village court.'

Village courts were established in 1976 through the Village Court Ordinance. But the courts became ineffective for certain inherent flaws, the source said.

'In drafting the Gram Adalat Bill, measures have been taken to remove those flaws which turned the village courts into platforms for exerting political influence,' the expert said.

The Gram Adalat would be empowered to order an accused to pay compensation to an aggrieved person, not exceeding

941 tribal refugees back on first day

From Our Correspondent

KHAGRACHHARI, Jan 1: A total of 941 tribal people returned from Tripura state of India today, marking resumption of the sixth phase of repatriation of refugees to their homes in Chittagong Hill Tracts.

The sixth phase will continue for nine days. So far about 25,000 refugees have returned since 1994.

Samiran Dewan, Chairman of Khagrachhari district council, received the returnees at Ramgarh. Kazi Golamur Rahman, Secretary of Special Affairs Division, was present.

On the other side, Tripura District Magistrate Lokranjan, Tribal Refugee Affairs Officers

Ajit Baran Chakma and Jagram Mog bade the refugees goodbye, according to UNB.

Of the returnees, 731 members of 135 families and 210 members of 50 families will be rehabilitated in Ramgarh and Manikchhari thanas respectively.

The members of the refugee families informed that they were the inhabitants of Ramgarh and Manikchhari thanas of the district and crossed the border to Tripura way back in 1986 due to massive violence.

Some 926 more refugees belonging to 195 tribal families would return home tomorrow through the same point, local administration sources said.

Saga of Radio-TV autonomy-III Fat cash lures BTV's men behind the show

by Reaz Ahmad

'It has been alleged by different quarters that officials of Bangladesh Television have engaged themselves in business and profit-making activities without prior approval from the government,' reads a BTV circular issued barely two months back.

The circular, coming from the Director General, reminds officials of the state-run television of the Government Employees' Rules of Conduct, 1979, which says, it is mandatory for all government officials and employees to take permission before they get into such activity.

This is not for the first time that the BTV authorities have come up with such a reminder. There was a similar warning a few months back. But it fell on the deaf ears of the officials, as the recent one is likely to be.

The most active are the BTV programme producers and technicians. And it is common knowledge that almost all of them are busy making money outside their place of work.

At least two producers, who agreed to talk to The Daily Star on condition of anonymity, confirmed this.

For them, the so-called package programmes are far more lucrative because that's where the money is. They know the tricks of the trade better than others, and they know how to get away with it, whatever be the quality. So they just go for it.

It's easy to befool their bosses — and who knows whether some of their superiors aren't on with them, as some sources alleged. They appear with fictitious names and addresses, and pass safely through the process.

Even the minister in-charge is a helpless watcher. 'I keep calling the DG, asking him to check whether the producers are there when they are supposed to be there,' says Abu

Indian Lok Sabha polls begin Feb 16

NEW DELHI, Jan 1: India's general election will be held over four days in February and March and the Election Commission today declared its determination to make the elections free and fair, report agencies.

The autonomous commission, responsible for overseeing the ballot by 600 million people in the world's largest democracy, said polls would be carried out region by region on February 16, 22 and 28 and March 7.

Voting will be held in most areas on February 16, followed by polls in other regions on the three remaining days. Vote counting is to begin March 8.

'This is a rather important election,' Gill said. 'It is coming in the 50th year of our independence, therefore, it must be conducted in such a manner that it does the whole country proud.'

Gill said he was determined to ensure balloting, involving 900,000 polling stations and

4.5 million officials, was 'peaceful and fair', adding: 'There should be no violence.'

The first day of polling will involve 222 out of the 545 seats in the lower house of parliament, with 186 at stake on the second date, 132 on the third and three on the last, two seats are nominated by the Indian president.

Hunt on, but Nasir has his men in Ctg police

From Staff Correspondent

CHITTAGONG, Jan 1: Chittagong Metropolitan Police has begun a combing operation in the city to round up the activists of Shibir-backed 'Nasir Bahini' who allegedly killed three BCL activists.

Armed assailants gunned down the AL-backed activists at Chandgao last Friday. Police raided some hideouts of Nasir Bahini and other terrorists but could not arrest the main accused in the triple-murder case. During the raid they could arrest only four suspects.

Police sources said Nasir, the ring leader, recently returned from Dubai. This has forced the police authorities to launch a fresh hunt for this millionaire 'terrorist'.

Nasir had fled to Dubai about five months ago in the face of a massive CMP drive for his arrest. He reportedly visited Chittagong several times. Earlier secretly went back.

The sources further informed that Nasir returned to the port city last week via India. He reportedly brought with him
