DCC's Public Health Lab inoperative for 8 months

By Staff Correspondent

Public Health Laboratory of the Dhaka City Corporation has now remained inoperative for more than eight months.

The laboratory — only official centre for testing quality of food in the city — has been idle because DCC policy-makers did not bother to give it room to start its function.

The Chemists and several other technical staff of the laboratory have not done any job since the laboratory was shifted from city's old town to the Nagar Bhaban more than eight months ago.

The staff came to office in the morning and laze around all day and gossip over cups of tea amid boxes of packed testing equipment in the room.

Following reports published in The Daily Star last year, it was decided that the laboratory would be shifted to a building near the Bangabazar. But the shifting is yet to take place. DCC officials said none cared for the laboratory although it had one of the most important responsibilities in the city.

DCC's public health laboratory and its inspectors are assigned to make random checks on food items at hotels, restaurants and food manufacturing plants and prosecute the culprits.

A lab official said they could not move to the new premises because the engineering section was yet to hand them over the new building officially. "We are forgetting our technical work and God knows how many more days we will have to wait," he said.

The Mayor could not be reached for his comment.
