HAT sponsored walk, apparently a recent concept, dates back to 1959. Kenneth Johnson wanted some way of raising money for the World Refugee Fund. He thought of a walk from latchworth, Hertfordshire, where he lived, to Yatesbury in Wiltshire. He charged an entry fee of 5 pence and everyone joining was expected to gather sponsors who would pay a fixed sum for every mile they walked. Twenty-one people took part and the event raised twenty pounds. The event failed because of the long distance and no one completed the course. The final three walkers gave up after fifty miles.

A classic tale that something which does not begin well can still succeed in the end. It's the spirit that matters.
