

VORLD CUP'98

MAN IN THE SPOTLIGHT: Edgar Davids (C) becomes the centre of euphoric Dutch celebrations after netting the winner against Yugoslavia at Toulouse on June 29.

- AFP photo

Dutch discontent

TOULOUSE, France, June 30 (AFP/ Internet): It was somehow appropriate that minutes after Holland's last-gasp 2-1 victory over Yugoslavia, a violent thunderstorm broke out over the Stade Municipal.

For while Edgar Davids' 20vard drive two minutes into injury time clinched the Dutch a World Cup quarter-final clash against Argentina or England, the reaction to the goal highlighted the fact that rumbles of discontent are never far away where Guus Hiddink's 22 are concerned.

As Davids was mobbed by his jubilant team-mates at the final whistle, there was the extraordinary sight of Dutch goalkeeper Edwin van der Sar apparently lashing out at his team-mates after being prevented from joining in the congratulations being heaped on the man they call 'Pitbull'.

Substitute Winston Bogarde, like Davids a member of the Surinam clan in the Dutch squad, seemed intent on refusing the giant white goalkeeper access to hero of the moment.

It was a sour end to a night of Orange delight in France's socalled Pink City and will have done little to eradicate the suspicion that Holland's squad remains divided on racial lines.

Davids, of course, was the player sent home by Hiddink from Euro 96 after he accused the coach of favouring white

Hiddink added another Surinamer, former international Frank Rijkaard, to his coaching staff in a bid to help harmonise the squad for France 98, but the sight of players like Davids, Bogarde,

Clarence Seedorf and Patrick Kluivert forming their own clique in training this week suggests differences have not been entirely buried.

The Van der Sar episode, and Dennis Bergkamp's second-half stamp on Yugoslav defender Sinisa Mihajlovic, suggest that, not for the first time, lack of temperament could be Holland's undoing at a major tournament. Undoubtedly the incidents took the shine off a dramatic victory against an ultra-cautious Yugoslavia side who despite defending for almost the entire 90 minutes could well have won the game themselves.

Yet when Bergkamp, who later admitted he was lucky not to be sent off over the Mihailovic incident, hit a Dutch record-equalling 35th goal for his country by firing a low shot under Yugoslav goalkeeper Ivica Kralj in the 38th minute, there looked to be only one

Kralj probably should have done better, but in truth it was only his saves that kept the Yugoslavs in the game as coach Slobodan Santrac opted to start with just one attacker, Predrag Mijatovic.

winner.

It certainly wasn't the Real Madrid striker's night.

. Three minutes into the second half the Yugoslavs grabbed an unexpected lifeline when Slobodan Komljenovic took advantage of shoddy Dutch marking to head home a Dragan Stojkovic free-kick.

Amazingly, Mijatovic then had the chance to put his side ahead after Jaap Stam clumsily pulled down Vladimir Jugovic in the area. But Mijatovic lost his composure and blasted his penalty onto the underside of Van der Sar's bar.

It was the first non-shootout penalty miss in a World Cup since Enzo Scifo missed for Belgium against Spain in Italy

"I knew Mijatovic liked to wait for the goalkeeper to commit himself so I had told my goalkeeper to wait as long as possible and force Mijatovic to make a choice," said Hiddink afterwards. Mijatovic, who scored the only goal as Real beat Davids' Italian club Juventus in the European Cup final in May, preferred to blame fate. "Luck was against me," he said. "That was the worst moment of my ca-

It was a doubly ironic miss, given that Stojkovic and Mijatovic had smilingly informed the media on Sunday that they didn't practice penalties, and that Yugoslavia's last loss at the World Cup, eight years ago in Italy, was a penalty shootout defeat in the quarter-finals by Argentina. It left Holland to pour forward looking for a winner, and Kralj saved heroically from Seedorf and Marc Overmars before Davids' drive following a corner deflected off a defender and his fingers into the corner of the net. "To be frank, I was thinking ahead to extra time and I was about to substitute Davids, who had cramp," admitted Hiddink. "Thank God I didn't."

Davids himself said: "I just gave it everything -- I was cramping up and knew I was go-ing to come off if it went to extra-time."

PARIS, Jun 30 (AP): Christian Vieri became a star at home in Italy. Then he was one abroad in Spain. Now he has taken his ascending fame to the World Cup.

Luis Hernandez was just a fading starlet with Mexican club Necaxa. Two weeks at France '98 changed all that.

Ronaldo was supposed to be the ultimate superstar of this World Cup. Hyped by a massive marketing campaign, the Brazilian striker was been reduced to the level of mere greatness along with a few others among the 704 players who have taken the field since the tournament began June 10.

The second round wraps up Tuesday with Argentina vs England and Romania vs Croatia. and if the Coupe du Monde has taught us anything, it is that in soccer's global village, surprises are ever harder to come by. Almost everybody knows one another and any blase armchair fan can always blurt out he's seen it all before - and probably be right too.

That's why the sudden emergence of Hernandez, all long blond manes and good looks. warms the heart.

Out of the blue, he scored four goals for outsider Mexico and gave Germany a mighty fright Monday before the European champions eventually emerged 2-1 victors.

Then again, one can never aspire high enough in the World Cup. With the Germans trailing and being outplayed. Hernandez missed the simplest of tap-ins from close range, keeping Germany in the game and ending

BUENOS AIRES, June 30:

Diego Maradona could be playing in England next season after being offered a job as player-coach, his agent said on Sun-

The agent, Guillermo Cop-

pola, indicated to a red radio that newly relegated first-division Crystal Palace may be the surprise as we were going to France for the Argentina-England match but we will have to postpone it as we have been speaking to an English agent," everything signed this week," he said, adding the 37-year-old former Argentina captain was being offered an interpreter and a crash course in English and could take two of his Argentinos stepped down as player-coach of Crystal Palace after the south

Italian Attilio Lombardo

Juniors clubmates with him.

"(The agent) is trying to get "The offer has taken us by day, reports Reuters.

Coppola said.

his World Cup heroics on a sour

For Atletico Madrid's Vieri, the World Cup run is still alive. With a build seemingly chiseled out of granite, he has rumbled home five goals in just four games and is hot and ready for Friday's quarterfinal against the host nation.

"I'm going through a great spell," he said hoping to enter World Cup history alongside such national heroes as Paolo Rossi and Toto Schillachi, top scorers in 1982 and 1990.

Despite four goals, Ronaldo is on no such high. He's hit the woodwork from several angles. Brazil is through to the quarterfinals, yet he has his work cut out of make sure the 1998 finals will be identified with him.

"He's still not the Ronaldo we all want to see. He has a lot more to give," said Brazil's coach Mario Zagallo.

Of course, Ronaldo has to live up to being selected FIFA player-of-the-year twice. At 21, that is some task. Argentina's Gabriel Batistuta also has four goals going into Tuesday's second-round match against England. By corrtrast. England's main man, Alan Shearer, has just a single Something else has been missing too. A true No 10. a playmaker that can singlehandedly turn a game and is an inspiration to his team, still has to emerge.

France's Zinedine Zidane could have been one, but kicking an opponent cost him a twomatch suspension, and he's lucky that France won without him and scraped into the quar-

Maradona England bound!

London club were relegated.

Former England coach Terry

Venables was hired as manager last month, returning to the club where he began his coach-

World Cup — winning career was blighted by drug abuse, this month dropped plans to work for Argentine television at the World Cup, saying he was too depressed after a court handed him a suspended sentence for shooting journalists with an

He had, however, been expected to fly in for Tuesday's match between Argentina and England in St Etienne but was not on Sunday's Air France flight from Buenos Aires to give England a chance to avenge their defeat in the 1986 World

Cup quarter-finals, the game in which Maradona battered home

The second round tie will air rifle.

Paris.

Maradona, whose brilliant terfinals.

Italy's Alessandro Del Piero got his opportunities but was so ineffectual, especially against Norway, that it seemed he was only stealing playing time from veteran Roberto Baggio.

In other positions, the aura of Jose Luis Chilavert stands out. The goalkeeper was great as underdogs Paraguay sent Spain and Bulgaria packing in the first round, and he was even better when he kept France at bay for 114 minutes in Sunday's second-round match before conceding the first World Cup "golden goal."

It could have been different, if France's defence had not been led by Marcel Desailly, truly a giant among the World Cup defenders so far.

Argentina's defence, on the other hand, is one united star. It's the only team yet to concede

Sometimes it only takes a few seconds to become a World Cup shooting star. Cameroon's Pierre Njanka set loose from his own half, slalomed past opponent after opponent and a handful of seconds later unleashed a most incredible drive past Austria's Michael Konsel. It is still on daily newsreels al over France. Danish substitute Ebbe Sand only needed half a minute after entering the game to seal Nigeria's fate with the third goal in a 4-1 drubbing of Nigeria.

Meanwhile, sidestepping most of the spectaculars, Germany keep marching on with singularly solid performances, underlining it takes more than a few flashes to win the Cup.

his notorious "Hand of God goal and which set him on course to lift the trophy for his

Were Maradona to sign -

and his name has cropped up many times before in a host of unconsummated transfer deals

- it would not be his first ap-

In 1986, he played for Tottenham Hostpur in a testimonial match for Argentine Osvaldo Ardiles. Playing alongside that day was current Eng-have had a career in England early on. Just after Argentina's

1978 World Cup win the canny

Yorkshiremen who run

Sheffield United felt 700,000

US dollars was too much to pay for the then 17-year-old

Maradona, who did not play in those finals. Six years later,

Napoli paid Barcelona 9 mil lion dollars for him

The Argentine idol might land manager Glenn Hoddle.

pearance for an English club.

country.

GREAT ESCAPE: Dutch goalkeeper Edwin van Der Sar watches a bullet spot kick from Yugoslav striker Predrag

- AFP photo Mijatovic's fatal fluff

Mijatovic (not in picture) about to crash on the crosspiece

TOULOUSE, France, June 30: (AP): Yugoslav star striker Predrag Mijatovic was shattered. Dutch goalkeeper Edwin van der Sar said he couldn't be happier.

at Toulouse on June 29.

Mijatovic, who scored the only goal in May's European Champions' Cup final to give Real Madrid the title over Juventus, drove a penalty kick high into the crossbar to waste Yugoslavia's best chance at a victory against the Netherlands at the World Cup on Monday.

Edgar Davids sent a 25-year shot home in the second minute of second-half injury time to lift the Netherlands into the quarterfinals with a 2-1 victory over Yugoslavia.

The penalty kick was awarded in the 51st minute with the score 1-1.

"This is the worst moment in my career," Mijatovic said, "The Dutch goalie is tall, so I decided to shoot high and under the bar. It didn't work. I'm sad for my teammates. Van der Sar said he got instructions from his coach, Guus Hidding, that Mijatovic always waits before kicking a penalty to see where a goalie is going to dive. Hiddink trained Mijatovic in Valencia before the Yugoslav striker moved to Real Madrid two seasons ago.

"So I waited a bit longer before making a move," Van der Sar said. "I think this put Mijatovic off. He lost concentra-

"I couldn't be happier. Who knows what would have happened at the end if the Yugoslavs took the lead."

It was the first missed penalty kick in France '98. The victory put the Dutch in a round-of-eight meeting Satur day in Marselille with the wir. ner of today's Argentina-Eng. land match. Dennis Bergkamp broke through the defensively defermined Yugoslavs in the 3.8th minute, giving him 35 goals in a Dutch uniform and tying him with Faas Wilkes of the 1940s and '50s for the Netherl' ands's career lead. Bergkamp ran to a long ball out of the back from Du tch captain and defender Frank de Boer, settling it as Yug oslav defence Zoran Mirkovic fell. He blasted a shot from 15 yards that Yugoslav goalke seper Ivica Krlj managed to get 'nis hands to, but couldn't stop from squirting through and dribbling inside the left post.

The Yugoslavs came out quickly in the second half. drawing even it a the 49th minute. Dragarı Stojikovic lofted a free kick from just outside the left side of the penalty area onto the he ad of defender Slobodan Koc ljenovic, who drove the ball just inside the far post for his se cond goal of the tournament "We lost al i the duels in the first half. The Dutch were always one step ahead of us," Komljenovic said. "In the second half, our game picked up.

"If Mija tovic scored that penalty and we took the lead, it would have been a completely different game for us. But we have to be: fair, the Dutch are a great tearn and they deserved to

Beautiful game?

PARIS, June 30 (AFP/ Internet): Is this the World Cup finals with the most gifted soccer players on the planet, or is the second round the stuff of potbellied pub sides and wheezing Sunday morning footballers?

The World Cup is supposed to be the ultimate perfection of the Beautiful Game -- sophistication, elegance and breathtaking ball skills from its greatest exponents, guided by the most sophisticated coaches in the busi-

Tactics, training, pre-match strategy, sports psychologists, dieticians, a battery of exercise machines and medical equipment -- nothing is left to chance. Yet the route to the quarteerfinals of France 98 is proving to be anything but sophisticate d.

Centuries ago, when foo tball was played by English villa gers in "matches" involving hundreds of people, the main tactic was booting the ball as h ard as you could and having so meone else run after it. For all the sophis tication and sponsorship in the modern game, it's a tactic which has now guided both Italy and Holland into the quarte r-finals of the 1998 World Cup.

Luigi Di Biagio hoofed the ball upfield in the 18th minute against Norway, and Christian Vieri huffed and puffed as fast as he could after it before crashing his shot into the net.

Italy's coach Cesare Maldini hailed this de monstration of kick-and-run 2 is a masterpiece -- "a textbook goal", he trumpeted. Vieri, for the record, had also scored an identical goal against Chile.

On Monday night, another long ball vielled upfield had Dennis Ber gkamp scurrying off - AFP photo in pursuit, and his shot sent Holland on their way to a 2-1 victory over Yugoslavia.

Flowever, the Yugoslavs will not easily forgive Predrag Mijatovic for clubbing his penalty against the crossbar. Germany didn't need the al mighty punt upfield or a p enalty blunder to beat Mexico. but Jurgen Klinsmann's crucial equaliser had all the hallmarks of people who usually play with goals no nets. Dietmar Hamann sent a hopeful cross into the middle and the ball managed to somehow slip between the legs of defender Raul Lara. It then bobbled straight to the feet of Klinsmann, who promptly whacked it home from halfdozen yards. For a tournament that cost half a billion dollars to stage. the crucial goals are clearly coming in the style of games financed by a whip-round at clos-

Spain failed to make the second round after failing to recover from goalkeeper Andoni Zubizarreta's howler against Nigeria, when he shoved a harmless cross into his own

And Nigeria keeper Peter Rufai literally had a hand in two of Denmark's four goals by parrying shots and letting the ball drop into the path of an opponent in their second round de-

Arguably though, the writin had been on the wall since the very first match at France 98, when Scotland were denied a draw with Brazil after a pantomime own goal set a trend for the rest of the tournament.

The Stade de France may be a feat of modern architecture. but the spectacle sometimes would not be out of place at Hackney Marshes.

END OF THE ROAD: A dejected Mexican keeper Jorge Campos sits alone after the fixture with Germany.

