Inter welcome Baggio

MILAN, July 29: Hundreds of jubilant Inter Milan fans on Tuesday cheered Roberto Baggio as the newly acquired veteran striker arrived at the club's headquarters for his introduction to the media, reports AP.

The 31-year-old Italian signed a two-year contract with Inter to join Brazilian super-star Ronaldo, who's expected to return by mid-August.

Ronaldo was given a onemonth vacation by the Italian club to recover from the World

"I have been long thinking of our next matches together. Baggio said. "It's exciting to think I can feed him so that he can score goals, taking advantage of his speed and power."

Baggio said he believes Ronaldo's problems prior to the World Cup final, which included reported vomiting and convulsions the day of the championship match against France, probably resulted from the relentless scrutiny of being in the World Cup spotlight.

"It can happen when you have too many trips, too much stress and little rest," Baggio

The Italian forward, who scored 22 goals with lightly regarded Bologna last year, will get 4.5 billion lire (2.5 million dollars) a year from Inter, his fifth Serie A club.

Baggio debuted with Fiorentina in 1985 and also has played with Juventus, AC Milan and Bologna. He has 151 goals in 316 league matches.

Baggio said he hoped to keep his place on the national team for the upcoming European Championship qualifying matches under new coach Dino Entering as a substitute for Alessandro Del Piero, Baggio was considered one of Italy's best players at France 98.

Baggio was expected to make his debut for Inter in a European Champions Cup match scheduled in Pisa on Aug. 12. Inter qualified for the tournament by finishing second to Juventus last season.

Orti said Ortega had agreed a five-year deal with Sampdoria. The 24-year-old Ortega, who starred in Argentina's midfield during the World Cup wearing Diego Maradona's old number 10, had been looking for MUNICH, July 29: German prosecutors have no immediate plans to open a tax evasion investigation against tennis star Boris Becker, the chief Munich prosecutor said Wednesday, re-

Peter Schlicht said city tax officials were handling an inquiry into Becker's taxes, and that prosecutors would get involved only after the tax offi-

Tax agents this week raided about 30 locations linked to Becker on suspicion that he evaded taxes on millions of dollars in earnings.

speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed the raids, first reported by the Munich newspaper Sueddeutsche Zeitung.

The agents searched offices and apartments of Becker's friends and sponsors on Monday, the newspaper said.

Becker and his former manager Ion Tiriac are suspected of evading taxes on millions of dollars of Becker's earnings from 1990 to 1993.

The Sueddeutsche Zeitung said offices of the German Tennis Federation also were searched. Federation officials declined to comment.

Tax authorities want to find out how much time Becker spent in Monte Carlo, the tax haven where he officially resided between 1990 and 1993. Under German law, Becker would have had to spend at least 185 days per year in Monte Carlo to avoid paying German taxes. cials present their report.

Munich tax agency sources,

Becker, a three-time Wimbledon champion, the former No. 1 in the world and the country's Davis Cup captain, remains one of Germany's most popular personalities. He is in semi-retirement on the tennis circuit, playing only selected tournaments.

Becker and Tiriac have denied the accusations since they first surfaced in February last year. Prosecutors never charged the two men, indicating they did not believe they had a strong case.

Zagallo stays content

29: Mario Zagallo. the outgoing coach of Brazil's national soccer

Tuesday he was not bitter about being fired and spoke proudly of his record. "I'm not walking away distraught. I've been with the team for five World Cup finals, with four victories and one runners up place. I'm very proud," Zagallo told Reuters in a telephone interview. Brazilian football federation (CBF) president Ricardo Texeira fired Zagallo together with the rest of the national team's management staff on Monday, saying the time was ripe for a change. Texeira praised Zagallo's efforts during the World Cup in France where the Brazilians played some exceptional football until suffering a stinging 3-0 defeat to hosts France in the

"The management staff's work during the World Cup was excellent. But now we are going to build a new team that will begin working with their mind set on the 2002 World Cup," Texeira told reporters.

Zagallo maintained he was proud of his team's performance in the final against France but said a nervous fit suffered by star striker Ronaldo shortly before the match had punctured the rest of the team's confidence.

"If I could change one thing, it would be what happened to Ronaldo. But I stand behind the team doctors, who carried out their jobs very well." Zagallo

He said it was clear something had gone awry if one compared Brazil's performance in the games leading up to the final to the team's lacklustre performance against the French.

"If you compare the Holland game to the final it shows clearly how this affected the team and had them playing differently," said Zagallo in a reference to the nail-biting semifinal match in which Brazil beat the Netherlands in a penalty shootout.

Mario "the wolf" Zagallo, is a controversial figure in Brazilian soccer. Deeply religious, he maintained a prickly relationship with the press, who together with many soccer fans despaired at his choices for some of the team's key positions and censured him for his seemingly stubborn loyalty to several of the older members of the team.

Nonetheless, few could argue with the credentials of the 66year-old. As a player in 1958 and 1962 he was part of the Brazilian team that brought home the World Cup. In 1970 and 1994, when Brazil won their third and fourth World Cups in Mexico and the United States he was a member of the coaching staff.

France '98 offered him the chance of a fifth World Cup winners' medal but it was not to be. Faced with a fiercely determined French side, the Brazilians were a colourless shadow of their normal selves and meekly surrendered the chance of a record fifth title.

On their return home, the players received a muted welcome, but Zagallo declined to speculate over who the CBF would pick to replace him and would not say whether he would consider coaching a local Brazilian team.

Perhaps I will work for a soccer club, but really I don't know," Zagallo said.

Valderrama disciplined

DALE, Florida, League Soccer fined Miami Fusion midfielder

Carlos Valderrama 10,000 US dollars on Tuesday for missing a pair of practice sessions before Miami's match last Sunday, reports Reuters.

New coach Ivo Wortmann said the Colombian interna tional would not play in Mi ami's home match against Columbus Wednesday night, but was not considered suspended.

Valderrama, Colombia's captain at the recent World Cup finals, walked out of the Fusion's July 24 practice, apparently angered over the sacking of Miami coach Carlos Cordoba an Argentine. Cordoba was replaced the same day by president Dough Logan told Reuters from the league office in New York. That is between the league and the player. We view this as a localised incident that occurred during a fair amount of tension.

Valderrama also failed to appear for a July 25 practice and was left off the team when it travelled to Foxboro, Massachusetts, later that day. Miami defeated the New England Revolution 2-1 Sunday afternoon in Wortmann's debut.

Valderrama had not been in contact with the team until Tuesday.

Wortmann and Valderrama met for 30 minutes before the squad's practice Tuesday evening. "He will not be playing "I won't comment about tomorrow (today)," Wortmann July 29: Major fines," MLS commissioner and said following the meeting. "I don't have anything against him. Valderrama wants to play > and remain with the team. "My decision is not a suspension, but he will not play tomorrow since he did not practice or play on Sunday.

"We came out of the meeting understanding each other, and Friday that was not the case. We were on two different wavelengths and not connecting." Wortmann said, adding that he intends to use Sunday's winning lineup again and work Valderrama back into the team later.

Some Fusion players believed that Valderrama, 37, was angered by the sacking of Cordoba, who posted an 8-11 mark with five victories coming via shootouts.
