Wenger prefers Anelka to Ronaldo

LONDON, Aug. 17: (Reuters/Internet) Arsene Wenger ruled out English champions Arsebecoming involved in any transfer chase for Brazilian striker Ronaldo because he prefers his team's French teenager Nicolas Anelka.

The French coach who led Arsenal to the League and FA Cup double last season, is still looking to sign a big-name forward following the summer departure of lan Wright, but he poured cold water on a Ronaldo bid, fuelled by newspaper reports that the Brazilian wants to play in England.

"We would never sign Ronaldo - if we did we would have to sell the north south and west stands to buy him," said the French manager. "But I believe that Anelka can do a better job for us. He has tremendous talent. Ronaldo has exceptional potential but for me I like team players.

"Nicolas had just as much aggression and explosive pace." Anelka, 19, made a favourable impression last season, helping Arsenal win the league and FA Cup double de-spite injuries to Wright and Dennis Bergkamp.

Wenger said he would not pay more than 10 million pounds ($ 16 million) for a player. But he is hopeful of signing another striker after selling reserve Isiah Rankin to Brad-championship. The Arsenal boss, who tipped Chelsea to emerge as their closest title challengers, said: "I think the current players can improve.

"I am positive they can build on what they have achieved in the last three months but it will be harder each season.

"Chelsea are the team that have impressed me the most. They have made good signings and I think Brain Laudrup will be a tremendous asset." Wenger also confirmed that Dutch winger Marc Overmars has signed a two-year extension to his contract, keeping him at Highbury until 2003.

Suker to miss Super Cup final

MADRID, Aug 17 (Reuters) Croatian World Cup player Da-vor Suker will miss the European Super Cup final against Chelsea on August 28 because of a knee injury.

The Real Madrid striker, who scored six goals as Croatia finished third in their first World Cup, picked up the injury in training and is expected to be out for at least two weeks.

Fernando Redondo, the Argentine midfielder, is another doubt for the European cham-pions after he suffered a similar injury in Friday night's victory over Atletico Madrid.

The Super Cup is played be-tween teh winners of last season's European Cup and Cup Winners' Cup.

Tony Adams thinking of retiring

LONDON, Aug 17: England World Cup defender Tony Adams says he may retire at the end of this season because of concerns over the pain-killing drugs he takes for his injured ankle, reports AP.

The Arsenal captain said Monday he was considering retirement because he was worried that anti-inflammatories could be causing permanent damage.

"If I find I have to take (antiinflammatories) before every game this season, then I will have to give a lot of thought to carrying on next season," he was quoted as saying in the Evening Standard newspaper.

'I want a life after football and there have been worrying reports of long-term side effects from constant use of these tablets."

Adams, who turned 32 in October, has played more than 600 games and admits he no longer has the ankles of a youth.

Wilson seeks to silence critics

BUDAPEST, Aug 17: Four years ago, at the last European Championships Wilson

Kipketer was a familiar figure on the international circuit but the country listed beside the name was Kenya rather than Denmark, reports Reuters.

Since then he has become a citizen of his adopted Scandinavian homeland, won two world titles at his specialist event and last year reduced in two stages the world 800 metres record down to its present mark of one minute 41.11 seconds.

Kipketer now wants to put something on the mantelpiece of his Copenhagen home which truly proves he is European rather than African a European athletics title.

At the 17th European Championships from Tuesday to Sunday in the Hungarian capital, he is the overwhelming favourite to add a continental honour to his global accolades.

"It's obvious I'm not the same as everyone else." Kipketer quipped recently in a rare moment of humour from the often

"I was not able to compete in the Atlanta Olympics (he had not yet become a Danish citizen and Kenya blocked his participation for his new country) and so this is one title I want to win in the build up to the next Games in Sydney. And I want to win it for Denmark because the country has helped me enormously and opened its door wide to me.

During 1996 and 1997 Kipketer was unbeaten and seemingly unbeatable. However a bout of Malaria contracted in January during a quick trip to the land of his birth has meant he has only had two races this year prior to arriving in Budapest.

In Zurich last Wednesday he suffered his first defeat since the 1995 Grand Prix final when over 800 metres he succumbed to the finishing surge of Kenya's Japheth Kimutai.

"That defeat was sad but no surprise after so many weeks away from the track I only started training again in April and only have really had three weeks of hard training. The one thing I have to say is that my health is good now," Kipketer

Nevertheless the times from his two outings still put him way ahead of his European trials and his path to the gold medal was even eased slightly last week when Norway's Vebjorn Rodal, who won the Atlanta Olympic 800 metres gold medal in Kipketer's absence pulled out of the championships with shin splints.

If Kipketer decides to run his own race from the gun, rather than embark on a tactical battle then one of the longest standing championship best performances could fall.

The 800 metres best of 1:43.84, a time Kipketer has already beaten comfortably this year, has stood since 1978 when it was set by East Germany Olaf Beyer.

Tuesday, may be missing the dominant forces in the sport namely the Africans and the Americans but in Russia's Vetlana Masterkova and Wilson Kipketer of Denmark they possess two of the finest athletes of the 90s. reports AFP.

Masterkova and Kipketer, who are world record holders in the mile and 800 metres respectively, should more than make up for the evident lack of quality in other events such as the men's distance races and the men's 100 metres, which will boast a new winner for the first time since 1986 owing to Linford Christie's retirement. Masterkova, who burst into the scene at the relatively advanced age of 28 to take Olympic gold in both the 800 and 1500 metres in Atlanta, is competing in her first Europeans and while other athletes like pole vaulting legend Sergei Bubka have decided to give it a miss, she wants to make up for the disappointment of last year's World Championships in Athens.

"Thus these championships are very important to me as it gives me a chance to add a European title to my Olympic and Goodwill one's with the chance of the cleansweep next year in the world's and also to erase the frustrating memories of last year," she added.

However, Masterkova, who is married to former professional cyclist Assiat Saitov, will face a real battle as she comes up against world champion Carla Sacramento of Portugal and the diminutive Romanian, Gabriela Szabo, who handed the Russian her only defeat of the season in Monaco 10 days ago. Masterkova, though, firmly scotched any ideas that she might have peaked too early when she avenged that defeat in Zurich last Wednesday and then set aside any thoughts her rivals might have had about replacing her at the top of the tree. "I just wanted to show who was boss," she said.

The other event that should be of the highest standard will be the men's 400 metres, which could bring a great Britain 1-2-3 champion and world 400 metres titleholder Michael Johnson in Oslo earlier on the sea-Richardson, who won a
