QUOTE OF THE DAY: "T've been brought up in the wind, whether it's winter of summer it's very windy conditions. I've played in that since I'm 10 years old." - Patrick Rafter, who grew up in the Australian town of Mount Isa. Rafter beat No 12 Jonas Bjorkman, who played in long sleeves on a chilly afternoon made even colder by a 24mph (38-kph) wind.

Michael Klim upbeat

KUALA LUMPUR, Sept 10 (AFP): Michael Klim has put in the laps after the let-down of his World Swimming Championships euphoria and is hungry for more medals at the Commonwealth Games.

The star of last January's world titles in Perth with seven medals, four of them gold, the 21-year-old Australian says he has knuckled down after being distracted by his burgeoning business commitments in the wake of his fabulous success.

Klim came down to earth with a thud when he won just one of four individual swims at the Games trials in Melbourne last April following his patchy performances on the World Cup shortcourse circuit in Europe.

10: Defending champion Patrick Rafter powered into the semifinals of the US up a clash with top seed Pete Sampras whose won straight set win was little better than soso, reports AFP. Rafter, playing some of the best tennis of his career, swept into the final four with a ruthless 6-2, 6-3, 7-5 victory over doubles partner Jonas Bjorkman of Sweden.

"I can't play much better than that," the third-seeded Aussie said. "I volleyed very well. I served very well. It was a great day for me.

Sampras, on the other hand, played just well enough in a 6-3. 7-5, 6-4 victory over ninthseeded Slovakian Karol Kucera.

"I didn't play bad, I didn't play great," Sampras said. "I just got through." He said the biting wind on the Arthur Ashe Stadium Court made the match under the floodlights an endurance test. "It was nasty out here," he, said. 'With that cold, it's not fun to play. At the end my hands my racquet." Serving for the math at 5-4 in the third, Sampras fell be-were so cold I could barely hold hind 15-40. He battled back to deuce with a forehand volley winner and gave himself a match point with another volley, Kucera fended off defeat with a service return winner, but Sampras' 13th ace of the night again put the match one point away and Kucera then netted a forehand. "At 15-40. I was having a hard time with the wind." Sam-

Bjorkman, the 12th seed was clearly disappointed. He said he felt he had played "pretty well," but against Rafter in his current form it just wasn't enough.

"He just played too good," shrugged Bjorkman. Rafter said his success here last year, when he claimed his only Grand Slam singles title to date, had given him more confidence, as has his performance on hard courts this year. But he said Sampras, whose Wimbledon victory gave him 11 Grand Slam singles titles, one shy of the record 12 of Roy Emerson, would be dangerous. "He's been great consistently," Rafter said. "I had a

The two remaining quarter finals were scheduled for today, when unseeded Australian Mark Philippoussis was to take on unseeded Swede Thomas Johansson and French Open champion Carlos Mova, the Spanish 10th seed, faced another unseeded Swede, Magnus

Night makes the difference

Thursday as the tournament moves into its final three days. Tracy Austin, who won the Open twice and now broadcasts the event for USA Network, remembered the energy generated after dark.

"People just seem more into the match and more excited under the lights," she said. "You won't find tennis fans any louder or more vocal than in New York at night."

In the daytime, tennis at the Open sometimes seems like an afterthought to the fans milling around the food court or sunning in the stands. At night, the crowd is wired, entirely tuned to tennis.

The result can often be dramatic.

Typical was Andre Agassi's fourth-round match against Karol Kucera, scheduled for daytime but delayed until late afternoon. At the start, it was routine tennis. When the lights went on, the match turned elec-

Agassi became annoved when Kucera began tossing the ball several times before hitting. He did not hide his irritation and the crowd picked up on it, egging him on. He fed off the energy, staging a rally that was interrupted by the rain, forcing the match to be completed the next day. By then, the nature of the showdown had changed.

Agassi thought about that after losing in five sets. "Last night, it just got so competitive we could have put on boxing gloves, thrown darts, done anything not to do with tennis," he said. "Today was all about tennis, trying to execute game plans. It was the difference between emotion and precision, the difference between night and day.

NEW YORK, Sept 10 (AP): Martina Hingis is looking for a Grand Slam with victory in the US Open.

No. not singles, which she lost before the final at Wimbledon and the French Open. But she won the doubles at the first three Grand Slam tournaments this year and was in the doubles semifinals Thursday with Wimbledon singles champion Jana Novotna, who faces Hingis in the singles semifinals.

Although known more for her singles success. Hingis actually has won more doubles titles than singles — 20-19. She has won eight titles this year with four different partners. In 1997, she won six with five different partners.

This year Hingis won the Australian Open with Mirjana Lucic as a wildcard entrant. Then, with Novotna as a partner, she won both the French Open and Wimbledon.

In 1996 Hingis became the youngest person to win a Grand Slam title when she captured the Wimbledon doubles with Helena Sukova at 15 years, 10 months.

HOCKEY FANS

Wayne Gretzky and his wife, Janet, were in the players' box cheering for Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario on Wednesday night in weather more suited for hockey games than tennis matches.

Gretzky is a big tennis fan and participated in a charity event for the Vitas Gerulaitis Youth Foundation. Gerulaitis, a former tennis star who won the 1977 Australian Open, died after inhaling fumes from a swimming pool heater while napping in 1994.

New York Ranger teammates Mike Richter and Brian Leetch were also on hand during the day to support Gretzky. Another hockey player-turned-tennis fan has already had his tournament ended. Detroit Red Wing Sergei Fedorov followed the matches of his friend Anna Kournikova, who lost to Sanchez-Vicario in the fourth round.

MARTINA KNOWS

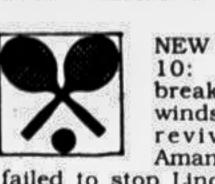

While other players possessed only a passing interest in the Mark McGwire feat, Martina Hingis was right on top of things McGwire's 62nd home run happened shortly after her victory over Monica Seles Tuesday night, and Hingis was already aware of details concerning it. "I think if you see other athletes doing well, it's just very motivating. That somebody is also doing great." Hingis said. "I mean it's a great record and there are still so many games to go. So he can even put the record Hingis said people were following the homers in the locker room during rain delays earlier in the day.

NEW YORK, Sept 10: Two rain breaks, blustery winds and a late revival from Amanda Coetzer failed to stop Lindsay Davenport setting up a semifinal slugfest against compatriot Venus Williams at the US Open cut out on Friday. The fifthseeded American, runner-up to Martina Hingis in her US Open debut last year, finished like and express train against Spain's Arantxa Sanches-Vicario, beating the French Open champion 2-6, 6-1, 6-1.

Things started off badly for the fifth-seeded Williams.

here Wednesday, reports AFP. No sooner had the 22-yearold second-seeded Davenport completed her 6-0, 6-4 victory over the 13th-seeded South African than she made it clear that this time she is ready to go all the way. "If I'm playing well I'm going to win the title," said Davenport, a semifinalist at both the Australian and French Opens this year and a quarterfinalist at Wimbledon. "I've been getting fitter every Grand Slam and I'm trying to be more relaxed about every match. Mentally I feel great. Physically I feel pretty good. "I feel that I've done everything I can up to this point to win. I'm going to give it my best shot. If it doesn't happen it doesn't happen. If it does that's great.

Williams served notice that Davenport will have her work whose superior power was no match for the fourth-seeded Spaniard's consistency.

But Williams cut down on her mistakes in the second set, became more aggressive at the net and quickly took a 3-0 lead. Sanchez held her serve for 3-

1, but had no real answer for Williams' speed and power. Williams opened the decisive set with a service break and held to lead 2-0, Sanchez managed to hold her serve in the third for her only game of the set as Williams advanced to her sixth-meeting with Davenport. "In the first set I was making a lot of errors, straying from my game plan," William's said. They key to the turnaround

she added, was simple. "I had to stop missing." she said. "I had to make up my mind that I wasn't going to miss any counts the 1994 US Open among he achievements - the 18-yearold Californian admitted: "She really stays in there and makes it a challenge.

Looking forward to the semifinal against Davenport, another big-hitter who has won four of their five previous encounters, Williams predicted: "We'll have some power hitting."

"I have to give my best. I have to know that I've done my best and that I've done all I can do. That's what I did tonight and that's what I'll do in semifi-

"Against Williams you have to try to keep the ball deep and stop her from being aggressive," Davenport said. "If I can keep her off balance that would be my game plan. At the start of Wednesday's showdown, which was interrupted twice by rain, Davenport was at her ruthless best. She constantly wrong-footed the 5ft 2 in (1m 58) Coetzer with blistering ground strokes down the flanks and time and against the South African players was left lunging at shadows. The first set lasted just 18 minutes and although Coetzer adapted better in the second, Davenport remained in charge despite needing five match points to clinch victory.

Coetzer looked shellshocked after the match.

"The way she hits the ball is intimidating. She hits really hard and deep. Points are over pretty quickly. You often feel like you don't really have a say in what's going to happen at the end of a point Friday's other semifinal will be between defending champion Martina Hingis and Wimbledon champion Jana Novotna.
