DORTMUND, Germany, Sept 14 (Reuters/ Internet): A VIL Bochum fan has been arrested on suspicion of throwing a plastic cup which wounded Thomas Haessler in the head during a first division soccer match against Borussia Dortmund on Sunday.

A spokesman for Dortmund police said on Monday a charge had been filed against the 24year-old fan, who was arrested after the incident on Sunday. He did not give further details.

Borussia Dortmund said on Monday they were considering lodging an official protest over the incident which was originally thought to have involved a plastic bottle.

"There have been similar cases." said club manager Michael Meier. "We will study the facts and it is possible that we will lodge a protest with the German Soccer Federation (DFB)." A DFB spokesman said the ruling body would study any protest Dortmund might file. adding the 1997 European champions had until 2400 local time on Tuesday night to do so.

Haessler was hit in the 17th minute of the Ruhr Valley derby by a hard plastic cup thrown from a section of the stands packed with Bochum fans.

The international midfielder received treatment for several minutes for a four-centimetre long cut on the top of his head. He was able to resume the game but was substituted at halftime.

Bochum won 1-0 through a late goal by South African striker Delron Buckley.

"It is obvious that the fact that we lost a player like Thomas Haessler through that kind of incident means the match was not fair." Meier said after the match.

A similar incident, also involving Bochum, occurred in the Bundesliga in May 1994. Bochum goalkeeper Andreas Wessels was hurt by a missile thrown from the stands during a game against Uerdingen.

Some solace for Martina

NEW YORK, Sept 14: Martina Hingis gained a measure of revenge over Lindsay Davenport at the United States Open on Sunday when she joined forces with Jana Novotna to win the women's doubles title, reports

Hingis, who lost to Davenport in straight sets in the singles final on Saturday, and Novotna beat Davenport and Natasha Zvereva of Belarus 6-3,

The victory means that Hingis was on the winning doubles team at all four Grand Slam even this season. She won the Australian Open doubles crown with Mirjana Lucic of Croatia, and added the French Open and Wimbledon titles with Novotna.

The last women players to | Martina Hingis (L) and doubles partners Jana Novotna win all four doubles titles in a season were Martina Navratilova and Pam Shriver in 1984.

Marion 'express' intercepted

14 (AP): Marion Jones was cold, wet and tired. But she had no excuses after losing for the first time this year.

"An athlete at this level must be able to compete under any circumstances," Jones said Sunday after finishing second to Germany's Heike Drechsler in the women's long jump on the third and final day of the World Cup.

Drechsler had a winning leap of 7.07 metres, ending the 22-year-old American's undefeated streak in women's sprints, long jump and relays at 37 victories. Jones, with a best this year of 7.31, finished second at 7.00.

It was the only disappoint-ment of the meet for Jones, who led the US women's squad to the team title. She turned in the world's third-fastest women's 200-metre time of 21.62 seconds on Friday and hand the fourthfastest 100 at 10.65 on Satur-

Jones said the only thing that marred the competition was the weather, which turned rainy and cold with a temperature of 7 degrees Celsius (45 degrees Fahrenheit). But she quickly added that wasn't and excuse for her long-jump loss.

The rain disappointed athletes and sponsors who had hoped for more record-setting performances at Johannesburg's high altitude of 1,650 metres (5.410 feet) above sea level.

issue in today's match because

PLAYING THE TEENIS OF HIS LIFE: A smiling Patrick Rafter of Australia proudly holds the US Open trophy after his triumph in the final over compatriot Mark Philippoussis at Flushing Meadows, New York on - AFP photo September 13.

"It's not quite as euphoric as it was last year, but it's very satisfying." Rafter told a room full of reporters after claiming his second career Grand Slam title with a dominating 6-3, 3-6, 6-2, 6-0 victory over fellow Australian Mark Philippoussis on Sunday.

"Now I feel last year wasn't such a fluke. Now I can look at people and say I have done it again," added the likeable selfproclaimed beach burn, who has made the two-year-old Arthur Ashe Stadium his home court. Last year's genuine, almost childlike sense of wonder has been replaced by a feeling of entitlement from the 25-year-old The initial feeling was not quite as exciting as last year. he said of his second taste of Grand Slam glory. Take nothing away from this title but last year was really nerve wracking. Last year I was jumpy, I was nervous. I was all over the place. This year ... I felt as the other week or two," added Rafter, who went from potential one-slam wonder to simply wonderful with a brilliant title defence that showcased his great speed and agility along with a natural ease and touch with his volleys that invites comparisons with Stefan Edberg and John McEnroe.

In addition to joining the fraternity of great Australian tennis champions of the past, many of whom were here spurring him on, Rafter now finds himself in an elite group of repeat US Open winners that includes McEnroe, Edberg, Jimmy Connors and Ivan Lendl.

That list also includes Pete Sampras, the only player in the world with a higher ranking than Rafter and a player Rafter has now beaten twice in his sensational, sizzling summer of

"To be in their company! what can I say now, is an amazing feeling. It will probably hit home later on," said the Aussie heartthrob.

Part of what may be keeping Rafter so humble in the face of success that might bring chestthumping bravado from many other athletes is his realisation of how close he came to missing out on this momentous occa-

In Sunday's final Rafter said he flashed back to the first round in which he nearly lost to little-known Moroccan Hicham Arazi before coming back from two sets down to survive. "That's what I was thinking when I was sitting down at the changes, just nodding to myself thinking 'this is not right, I should be at home right now." "I felt very lucky and I felt that way the whole tournament, very lucky to be here."

But his low-key post-victory demeanor doesn't mean there won't be any celebrating in the great Australian tradition.

"There was a bottle of Dom Perignon when I got back yesterday," he said of his greeting following his semifinal win over four-time champion Pete Sampras.

"I'm sure there will be another bottle or two there in the hotel. There will be plenty of beer going around. There will be plenty of all sorts of alcoholic beverages going around this evening," he said, flashing a broad grin as he considered the upcoming revelry.

Rafter insists he has to learn to play as well on other surfaces as he does on hardcourt before he can "rival Pete at the top."

But as far as Sunday's vanquished foe is concerned. Rafter has already arrived at the pin-

"He's got to be the number one player in the world, he's lost two matches all summer. That's pretty good," Philippoussis said.

Diane, a young woman with a history of self-wounding, is picked up by the police, having clearly been attacked by someone. But Diane won't be drawn. Ken calls Paul to the station to examine Diane who suspects is the victim of rape. She is covered in cuts and bruises, but hotly denies she's been raped and refuses an internal examination. Meanwhile, Marty, lonely, confused and finding life tough in Aberdovey, refuses to contact home and is determined to prove to his father that he can survive without him.
